Homer Parker Files Contests in "8 or 10" Counties

CANDIDATE SEEKS RECOUNT, STRIKING BACK AT HARRISON

Adjutant-General's Action Follows Incumbent's Charge of Irregularity in Two Counties.

NO FRAUD CHARGED BY GENERAL PARKER

Candidate Declared Victor Says He Will Drop Contests If Harrison Will "Bow to People."

Striking back at the attitude taken by Comptroller General William B. Harrison in filing notices contesting the tabulation of ballots in Catoosa and Walker counties, Adjutant General Homer C. Parker, who on the face of complete returns has been declared nominated for that office, Sunday announced that he had filed contests in "eight or ten" Georgia counties demanding recounts of all ballots in the comptroller general's race.

Already having tied Mr. Harrison in the matter of county unit votes and having a majority of the popular vote cast during the primary, on the figures announced, General Parker's action added considerably to the statewide interest created as a result of the incumbent's action Saturday night in throwing the result of the primary into contested territory.

General Parker's retaliation was made known Sunday afternoon in a formal statement which he issued and in which he emphasized that in none of the counties in which contests had been filed had fraud been charged. He said he had taken this action on the advice of friends and legal representatives "after Mr. Harrison had announced that he would file contests in certain counties where the vote was close in my favor."

The adjutant general also made it clear that he was willing to withdraw his contests "if Mr. Harrison will abandon his contests" and expressed regret that his opponent "was not willing to abide by the action of the people of Georgia."

Both Walker and Catoosa counties, in which Harrison filed contests demanding recounts, were carried by a third candidate, B. M. Bullard. In making public his action, Mr. Harrison's representatives said the results of complete tabulation in each of these counties had resulted in varying totals for their candidate, and it was on this ground principally that the contest action was instituted.

Adjutant General Parker did not reveal the counties in which contest petitions had been filed, merely saying that he would insist upon a recount unless Mr. Harrison receded from his attitude regarding Catoosa and Walker counties.

Through his attorneys in Macon, Mr. Harrison Sunday announced that a statement would be issued today relative to his contests over results of the comptroller general's race. A conference was held in Macon Sunday with the comptroller general by a number of his friends, and Pope F. Brock attended. Mr. Brock issued a statement following the conference, in which he said that "the matter will probably take tangible form Monday and at that time a statement will be issued."

China Civil Strife Draws to Close

SOUP TIRM HEAD DIES SUDDENLY

Dr. Dorrance, Founder of Campbell Soup Company, Passes at Home.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Dr. John Thompson Dorrance, president and founder of the Campbell Soup Company, died at his home, Camden, N. J., Sept. 21, at the age of 57.

Dr. Dorrance returned from his summer home in Bar Harbor, Maine, last week and was confined to his bed with a slight illness. For several days he seemingly was on the road to recovery but this morning he collapsed.

His life was the traditional story of American success. From a $7.50-a-week employee in his uncle's fruit and preserve factory, he rose to the head of a worldwide business organization. He was the sole owner of the Campbell Soup Company.

Dr. Dorrance was born in Bristol, Pa. He received his early education in Philadelphia, was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1885, and won his Ph.D. at the University of Göttingen in 1897.

While in Germany, his associates said, he conceived the idea of making condensed, canned soup available in America. He returned to this country, joined the Campbell Fruit and Preserve Company, his uncle's firm, and in 1899 put out the first batch of condensed soup.

From that time the company grew rapidly, in 1915 becoming the Campbell Soup Company. His principal business idea, that of concentration and mass production, led him to confine his company's activities to soup and one or two other commodities. He believed in continuous and general advertising, coupled with a low priced product, easily available.

Manchurian War Lord Joins Chiang To Drive Rebels Out of Peiping, Terminating War.

BY D. C. BESS, United News Staff Correspondent. PEIPING, China, Sept. 21.—(UN)—The Chinese civil war which started last April and for months was a threat to the life of the national government at Nanking apparently ended today.

Manchurian troops, which announced they were co-operating with the national government, occupied the chief strategic points in the Shansi and Shantung territory held by the northern rebel armies. Meeting no opposition, the Manchurians took over the important city of Tientsin, important railroad junction, and advanced toward Peiping, where the northerners had set up their capital.

Peiping, once the city of the Manchus, was not defended and the invading troops entered the city late tonight.

Feng Yu-hsiang, famed as "the Christian general" and once the most powerful of Chinese war lords, and Yen Hsi-shan, head of the northern government, were expected to flee abroad as the result of the collapse of their challenge to the authority of Chiang Kai-shek, youthful leader of the national government.

Peiping Quiet. The ancient city of Peiping and the surrounding region were quiet during the period of withdrawal of the northern coalition forces and the invasion of the "peace army" of Chang Hsueh-liang, the Manchurian ruler who intervened to end the civil war.

The United News correspondent, making an automobile tour outside the city, found no sign of disorder, except the natives or soldiers. All foreigners were safe.

The evacuating northern troops left only a small garrison at Peiping, and the garrison announced its surrender to the Manchurians. There were 4,000 Manchurians at Tientsin.

The Manchurian peace movement, which marked the fall of the ageing veterans of military activity in China, was successful throughout the provinces involved. The Shantung province joined the plea of Chang for peace and the evacuation and evacuating movements proceeded quietly without disturbing the countryside.

Representative of Chang Hsueh-liang was sent to Peiping from Tientsin to arrange the peaceful arrival of Manchurian forces here.

GEORGIA PLANTER SLAIN DURING RAID ON COUNTRY HOME

Whitfield Countian, Aiding Bailiff, Shot From Bushes as He Approaches Rear of House.

DALTON, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Wilson, 45, prominent planter residing in the western part of Whitfield county, died this morning at the Hamilton Memorial hospital here, from wounds received Saturday night when he was shot from ambush while in the act of helping a county bailiff raid an alleged disorderly house eight miles from Dalton, in what is known as the Prickum district.

Wilson and Leonard Wood, a neighbor, on request of the officer, accompanied Needham Kenemer, bailiff of the Prickum district, to the house where the shooting occurred. On approaching the house, Kenemer strode to the front door sending the two deputized citizens to a rear door. As the two knocked at this door a shotgun was fired from tall weeds located there, and a barrage of buckshot took effect in Wilson's left side. Wood was slightly wounded in the hand.

According to the officer, he went to the home of Wilson and asked him to accompany him and Wood to the house for an investigation of charges made by neighbors, that a disturbance had been going on there. Wilson was on the point of retiring, but donned his clothing and accompanied the officer. The house which they brought to the Dalton jail to face charges of being accessories to the affair. They denied any knowledge of the shooting, or identity of the slayer. Their names were withheld by police.

The wounded man was rushed to the hospital here where he died of his wounds about 10 o'clock this morning. He is survived by his widow and several children. Funeral arrangements will be made Tuesday, following the arrival of a brother, Will Wilson, of Dalton.

Officers scouring the entire county traced the slayer from his ambush in the weeds to the highway, where automobile fire trucks indicated that he had effected his escape by car. Late Sunday night officers declared they had a definite clue to the identity of the slayer.

Stunt Leap From Hudson River Span Ends in Tragedy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A stunt leap from the incomplete Hudson river bridge to the water, 213 feet below today cost the life of Norman J. Terry, 24-year-old professional high diver and parachute jumper from Kitterman, Pa.

Thousands of motorists and pedestrians on the New York and New Jersey shores saw Terry hurtle from the dizzy height and strike the water flat on his back. He died instantly of a broken spine.

Police arrested James J. Murray, 26, of Staten Island, whom they described as Terry's manager. A technical charge of homicide was placed against him.

At first police announced the jump was conducted under the sponsorship of The New York Daily News and an unnamed motion picture concern. The News issued a statement saying it had nothing to do with planning the jump and merely had accepted an invitation from Terry to take pictures of it.

Terry, in some unexplained way, gained entrance to the approach to the bridge, which was closely guarded. He walked along a narrow catwalk and remained poised for a short time on a cable. Then he leaped. For perhaps 200 feet he remained in a vertical position, then his body twisted and struck the surface of the Hudson with tremendous force.

A speedboat containing Murray and some friends picked him up.

HYDE REAFFIRMS BELIEF REDS HURT GRAIN QUOTATIONS

Secretary Points Out Drop of 5 Cents Per Bushel in Wheat During Soviet Selling.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A more extended investigation of short selling of wheat by Russia in the Chicago pit was said today by Secretary Hyde to have become necessary through information from the president of the all-Russian textile syndicate, which placed the orders, that operations had continued for several months.

Action by the Chicago grain exchange was awaited on the opportunity which the secretary said was extended yesterday "to clear the deck by its own voluntary action." Hyde expressed indebtedness to E. V. Belitzky, the syndicate official, for his statement last night that the operations "were carried on over a period of several months."

Hitherto, he added, the department's investigation had covered only the last two weeks.

In a formal statement the cabinet member quoted Belitzky as saying that "Mr. Hyde's estimate of five million bushels as the amount of Soviet Russia's short sales is 'a little exaggerated'."

"That estimate was obtained from Mr. Belitzky's own company," Hyde continued. "It has proved to be, as he says, incorrect. Our investigations already show that, on four days, short sales by the Soviet government through three brokers amounted to over 7,500,000 bushels of wheat. Thus, actual sales already uncovered, over Mr. Belitzky's estimate by a little over 50 per cent."

"It is strange that the president of the all-Russian textile syndicate does not know within two and one-half million bushels how much wheat he has actually sold."

The syndicate had assured the department previously, he added, that their sales were confined to the past two weeks and that the check-up had covered only that period.

Hyde denied Belitzky's statement that the sales could not have appeared in the market because of the price drop. He said the price of wheat on the Chicago market due to the turnover of from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels a day.

"The answer is found in the course of prices during the four days covered by the sales so far identified," Hyde said. "Those four days are September 8, 9, 10, and 11. On September 8, wheat opened on Chicago at 99.1-8 or 11.2 cents above the previous close. The price dropped during the four days, the market on May wheat dropped from the opening of 99.1-8 to the close on September 11 at 94.1-8, a decline of five cents. Comparable declines were registered in all the other wheat futures."

The sales by Soviet Russia were probably made for all of this drop. I do say that such sales, added to the other bear factors, contributed greatly to a bear psychology which depressed the market. It is

Celler Proposes Space for Ads On U. S. Stamps

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The sale of space on postage stamps to private interests for advertising purposes was suggested today by Representative Celler, democrat, New York, as a possible means of eliminating the postal deficit without raising the postage rates on first-class mail.

Expressing opposition to Postmaster-General Brown's proposal for a rate increase of a half cent an ounce on sealed letters, the New Yorker, in a letter to the postmaster-general, said the increase "will not meet with any hearty response in congress."

Cannon Leaves Brazil Secretly

GALES CONTINUE TO SWEEP FRANCE

Death Toll Mounts to Nine as Winds Blow Unabated.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Nine sailors are known to have perished in an equinoctial gale along the French Atlantic seaboard and channel coast that appeared to be blowing itself out late tonight.

Winds, at times reaching a velocity of 80 to 100 miles an hour, left behind them a trail of damage and desolation after blowing for about 80 hours.

The full tale of the disaster has not yet been unfolded, many wires hanging from the trees and the western coasts of France were strewn with wreckage today.

Though the loss of life was comparatively small, the material is exceptionally heavy. Countless fishing boats and other small craft were torn by the gale from their moorings and wrecked.

At Quiberon, southern Brittany, the damage done to the harbor is estimated at a million francs. Many seaside resorts in Brittany and Normandy had all their bathhouses demolished and their boardwalks torn up.

The fury of the storm was felt throughout almost all of France. Innumerable chimneys were blown down in inland cities, trees were uprooted and tiles were torn off roofs.

Even southeastern France, including the sheltered Riviera, felt the force. A violent thunderstorm ravaged Cannes, flooding cellars and keeping the firemen busy for hours pumping out water.

Though the winds were subsiding toward midnight, the seas were still running mountain-high. Ports from Dunkirk in the north to Bayonne, in the Bay of Biscay, were still crowded with battered and storm-battered ships of all sorts and sizes.

Seventeen ships and taken refuge this evening in Cherbourg Roads, twelve were sheltered at Brest and seven more at Lorient, on the south coast of Brittany.

Many of these craft had had their rigging or their bridges swept away by wind and heavy seas.

STORMS SEEBIDE OVER ENGLAND.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A gale that had whipped the channel and the southwestern coast of England for 24 hours largely blew itself out during the night.

Reports of damage to shipping, however, continued to reach London.

Bishop Sailed for New York Last Tuesday as New Charges Were Hanging Fire.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, sailed last Tuesday from the port of Santos. His departure apparently had been kept a strict secret.

In Rio De Janeiro it had been generally believed the bishop was somewhere in the interior of Brazil on a trip of study and exploration. He was reported at Sao Paulo last week to have left for the interior with an indefinite destination.

No mention was made of his departure by members of the Methodist church in Brazil. Church leaders today were unwilling to confirm where the bishop had gone, merely stating "he is on the high seas."

In August he presided over the first of three conferences for working out a scheme for separation of the Brazilian Methodists from the parent body in the United States and constituting an autonomous Methodist council at Brasilia.

Then he went to Sao Paulo, where he presided over a second conference. He planned to do the same at a third conference in southern Brazil, and then at a general conference here late in October.

He came to Brazil on his honeymoon, having married his former secretary, Mrs. Helen McCallum, in London in July.

The couple sailed from Santos aboard the liner American Legion. He expected to return to the United States only about the middle of November, and said his work in Brazil would prevent him from taking part in the autumn political campaign there.

He said he would not be a factor in the pre-election campaign.

CANNON FACES ANOTHER INQUIRY.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop William A. Ainsworth, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, emerged unscathed by the fire of an official church investigation last May in Dallas, must face a second inquiry.

He expected to face a committee of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, in October in connection with church organization work.

He expected to return to the United States only about the middle of November, and said his work in Brazil would prevent him from taking part in the autumn political campaign there.

Should a committee of 12, which church rules require Bishop Ainsworth to call for the purpose of investigating the new charges, decide Bishop Cannon must stand trial he would be suspended until the 1934 conference when the trial would be held.

ATLANTAN SEEKS YEAR'S 4TH TITLE; VOIGT IS THREAT

Grim New Yorker Answers Bobby's Notice of Fitness With Splendid Sixty-Eight.

168 TO START PLAY TODAY

Greatest Golfer Must Weather Short Matches To Set Phenomenal Winning Record.

BY ED DANFORTH. Constitution Sports Editor.

Merion Cricket Club, Pa.—Bobby Jones served notice today on all the well-groomed boys who are here to play in the national amateur championship that he did not come to Merion just for the ride. The emperor ris up on his throne and tapped three times for order with his scepter, Calamity Jane. Then he took a practice swing with his scimitar, Nero Niblick. Three long putts and a chip shot holed from the edge of the green gave him four birdies in his final practice round. The four birdies helped him to a 69, one under par.

And that fracture of par caused the well-bred amateurs, some of whom look as if they should not be this far from home with school going on, to shiver just a little and wonder after all if there was any.

Bobby played in a foursome paired with Dick Jones, the man who nearly dumped Bob out of the tournament at Baltusrol against George Voigt, the saturnine man from North Hills, N. Y., and Watta Gunn, once of Atlanta. The Jones team won 3 and 2.

But while Bobby was serving his notice to the young men about town, Voigt himself wrote out a ticket. I think he put it under the windshield wiper of Bob's car. The ticket was 68, the same as the ticket Bobby had written. It served to show that Voigt, supposedly the man to be feared of all in the field, was ready to live up to the reputation he had earned.

If Bobby gets Voigt in one of the 36-hole matches, one of the classic struggles of championship golf may be written. The grim New Yorker has his game in hand.

It was an easy going match. Several times one or another played an extra ball when the other went bad. They tried, putt over and discussed strategy with each other. Yet they played the match out, firmly holding all putts that counted.

The match was the only feature of the last practice day before the tournament begins. Most of the lads were away relaxing or off on the practice tees working on their form. It was a bright Sunday afternoon considerably hotter than one would imagine normal in this latitude. Three thousand people scrambled after the big match. Marshals in red uniforms and red berets handled the long coils of rope to restrain the throng. They also were practicing. The red berets are an innovation and may be discarded before the week is over. It is hard to command respect in a red beret. However, there were a hundred Pennsylvania state troopers in gray shirts, blue trousers and black puttees and Sam Browns belts. They wore single action .44s at the hip with a row of cartridges in their belts. They got their men where they came from and where they were going.

When the tournament opens tomorrow, 50 United States marines from the navy yard will be here to keep the peace.

U. S. Prisoner Faces Freedom In Legal Coup

An unusual use of the writ of habeas corpus has been exercised to pave the way for the parole of a federal prisoner at the Atlanta penitentiary, it became known here Sunday upon the return from Boston of Joe Ewing, attorney who represented the man.

As a result Charles Wheelock, alias Murdock, now is in line for clemency from the local prison where he has served more than two years of a seven-year sentence for conspiracy, and is free of a charge of fraud in connection with an alleged $38,000 larceny, for which he was wanted in Massachusetts.

When the question of the federal parole came up it was found that Wheelock's path to freedom was blocked by the Massachusetts charge. In order to clear the way, Mr. Ewing, his attorney, went to Boston and obtained a writ of habeas corpus, ordering the government to produce the prisoner in Boston for trial on the fraud charge.

Although federal prosecutors have used the writ in similar manner—the Ponzi and Gerald Chapman cases—being outstanding examples—defense attorneys seldom have attempted to obtain release of clients on its authority. In Wheelock's case he was taken to Boston, where he stood trial on the fraud charge. Witnesses failed to identify him as the alleged defrauder, and the judge ordered a verdict of acquittal.

A musical program has been arranged, featuring songs by Clarence W. Wall and Floyd Jennings, with Joseph Ragan at the organ.

Most Imposing Parade Since War Set for Saturday

The longest and most imposing parade since the World War days is promised for Saturday morning, second day of the eighty-second division reunion, when scores of military, patriotic and civic organizations will march in honor of the "old camp Gordon boys." Members of the eighty-second, wearing caps with the "double A" insignia of the "All-Americans," will review the parade from the corner of Peachtree and Carnegie way and fall in line for the march to the city hall.

Scott Candler, president of the eighty-second division association; Trammell Scott, grand marshal, and W. A. Simon, chief of staff, have joined in urging every man who served with the division to march in the parade with their old "buddies." The reunion visitors, they point out, may be expected to fall in line, but it is especially desired that the 400 Atlanta members of the division take time off from their business and march in the parade in recognition of the visitors.

The parade will start from Peachtree and Baker streets at 10:30 o'clock and disband at the new city hall, where Mayor Ragsdale will present the key to the city to General George B. Duncan, commander of the division during the Argonne campaign.

The twenty-second infantry and its famous band from Fort McPherson will head the parade, followed by the 122d infantry, Georgia national guard, and Troop C, 108th cavalry, the Governor's Horse Guard.

Bands in the parade will include those of the twenty-second and 122d infantry, Georgia Tech, Atlanta Police department, American Legion, Georgia Power Company, Salvation Army, Naamah Temple, Mystic Shrine, B. P. O. Elks, Disabled American veterans and several schools.

Almost every patriotic organization, of both men and women, will have places in the parade, which will extend for more than a mile.

The reunion will start next Friday, with the arrival of the New York delegation. It will close Sunday afternoon with a memorial service at the Fox theater, to which the public is invited.

Reunion headquarters have been established at 72 North Broad street, on the street floor, where visitors will be registered and information furnished by the staff in charge.

Church To Speak At Foreign Trade Meet Wednesday

H. F. Church, director of the port, Charleston, S. C., will address the Atlanta Foreign Trade Club at their luncheon meeting, according to William A. Dunlap, of the United States department of commerce, headquarters of Mr. Church while at Atlanta, at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Mr. Church is coming to Atlanta especially to address the club on this occasion and will speak on developing foreign trade in the southeast. He has spent many years in developing the trade of this section and will stress the importance of shipping from southern ports, as well as the co-operative efforts that have been sponsored by Charleston and its sister ports of the South Atlantic toward the betterment of rates. This is a meeting in which all Atlanta exporters and importers should be interested and they are urged to attend and confer with Mr. Church personally.

A number of acceptances have already been received for the luncheon. Walter Ward, local agent for the North German Lloyd, will have as his guests several officials from the company's headquarters at New York. This is the first meeting of the club since early summer and a full

EUROPE ALSO SUFFERS DEPRESSION --- KLEIN

Commerce Secretary Says Manufacturing Is Slower Than Ours.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, said tonight in a radio speech that the business depression in the United States is duplicated in Europe.

Speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting System, Dr. Klein added that unemployment in Europe is far more serious than in this country, especially in Great Britain, Germany and Italy.

The rate of activity of manufacturing operations, he continued, "particularly those dependent upon overseas markets, is at a lower ebb than ours. Prices for their raw materials have shown the same declines as ours. Their foreign trade has fallen off even more markedly. Moreover, the depression is more keenly felt because of the excessive burden of taxation."

Various untoward events abroad preceded the depression, Dr. Klein said, and took place in advance of the stock exchange crash in the United States last fall. He added "stupendous efforts on the part of European governmental and business leaders to meet the ghastly destruction of the war" was an innocent cause contributing to "boom hysteria" in various nations.

Dr. Klein also asserted that combinations for price fixing, openly recognized and supported in several countries, aided the maintenance of artificial price levels leading to overproduction.

"The causes of this situation with all its ghastly miseries in nearly every part of the globe are universal and they have been eating into the body of the world's business for years," he said. "The cure will take time and patience and teamwork. The conviction grows among European observers that accelerated consumption, better and more economical distribution especially in domestic and foreign markets, is the answer. They insist that this production boom has been considerably aggravated in recent years by the policy of industries to plow in profits with plant expansion. The conviction is growing abroad, following our lead, that the counter balance to this is in stimulating consumption through steadily increasing wages and distribution to shareholders of corporation profits."

The Foremost Dairy Supplies Our Milk

We are pleased to announce to the housewives of Atlanta that the milk we are now serving in our Atlanta stores is supplied by the Foremost Dairy. We have selected the Foremost Dairy for this exclusive source of supply to us because of the high standing and popularity of Foremost products. Every bottle of milk offered through our city stores is designated as Grade A Pasteurized, and was graded as Grade A raw milk even before pasteurization. That's how careful the Foremost is in the selection of milk to be pasteurized. They declare their milk to be "Foremost in Quality and Flavor," and believing it to be so we have selected it as the correct and safe product to offer Atlanta housewives.

TO MANY PEOPLE, the situation now existing in Cordele, Ga., is a purely local matter in Cordele. On the contrary, it is of very great importance to the whole state of Georgia.

Briefly the facts of the situation are these--

Crisp County, in which Cordele is located, bonded itself, built an electric power plant and a few weeks ago went into business in competition with this Company's established electric business in Cordele.

The Cordele authorities immediately cut under this Company's rates, forcing the Company to meet the cut in an effort to preserve its business and property investment there. Cordele worked out no rates of their own based on the cost of supplying the service. They merely took this Company's rate schedule and cut it ten per cent. Even this Company's widely discussed "service charge" was included in the rates Cordele established.

Other unfair competition is being practiced, including threats of boycott and social ostracism, to force this Company's customers to cease doing business with it and buy from the municipal plant.

The issue in Cordele is not private-ownership vs. government-ownership in the electric business. The situation is that of a legitimate business attacked by unfair competition.

The outcome of the Cordele situation directly affects every Georgian and this advertisement is published in order that you may be informed.

What does the Cordele Situation mean to Georgia?

It Impairs Georgia's Reputation As a Safe Place for Outside Investments

The Georgia Power Company is the third largest property owner in Crisp County. Its total investment in business property there is exceeded only by those of two railroads. With the exception only of other privately-owned public utilities, this Company has more money invested in Crisp County than any other two or three industries in the county combined.

The Georgia Power Company is Georgia's largest industry.

Wide publicity is being given nationally to Cordele's effort to destroy its third largest industry. Wide publicity also is being given nationally to the efforts of an organized group of agitators, elsewhere in the State, who are seeking to capitalize on the Cordele situation, seeking to force a state-wide slash in this Company's already very low rates. If they should be successful, Georgia's largest industry would be destroyed.

Capital is timid. It seeks security. It goes only where it feels that it will be safe. The attitude of the public in a state or a section toward investments is one factor which new investors scrutinize most carefully.

The first question they ask is—"What is the attitude of the public toward investments already located there?"

Georgia needs new capital, billions of dollars of it, in order to develop its natural resources. At this stage of its development, Georgia cannot afford to gain a reputation as an unsafe place for investment.

It Reduces Georgia's Opportunity For Bringing New Industries Here

The nation has already learned that Georgia offers outstanding industrial advantages, and we predict that Georgia's future development will far surpass that of the past. Our industrial experts predict, for example, that Middle and South Georgia are due for a development of their ceramic and paper and pulp resources which will equal or surpass the textile industry in North Georgia.

But if this development is to take place, electric power conditions in Georgia must be right. Just the mere fact that a power plant is built does not bring industries flocking to a community, as people in Cordele have been led to believe.

In order to satisfy the demands of modern industry, electric power must not only be available but it must be dependable, it must be abundant, and it must be available over a wide area in order that an industry may pick and choose the location which best suits its needs.

The Georgia Power Company alone in Georgia is capable of offering electric power service of the quality that modern industry demands.

Small isolated power plants, such as the one at Cordele, have little to offer new industries. The Cordele plant depends upon the widely fluctuating flow of a single stream, and its output will be seriously curtailed in periods of high water or low water. It has very limited reserve facilities.

Such plants cannot help Georgia grow industrially, but they can seriously impair this Company's ability to carry on this work.

Again, industries do not come to a new section—they are brought.

The expense of this Company's campaign to bring new industries to Georgia is greater than the entire gross income which Cordele could collect from its municipal system.

It Diminishes the Georgia Farmer's Hope of Obtaining Electric Power

Rural electrification is a comparatively new thing in Georgia, but in less than two years since this Company first entered this field, it has extended service to nearly 3,000 farm customers.

Extending electric power to the farms is an expensive job. With very few customers to the mile of line, it obviously takes great sums of money to do the pioneering work in this field. This Company was not able financially to attempt it for many years of its history. But now the work has been inaugurated, many farms already are being served, and many more farmers are anxious to obtain this service.

Georgia's farmers will not permit this work to be checked!

Cordele has not moved even to extend rural service to the farms in Crisp County, even though every farmer in the county contributed in his taxes to the construction of the county-owned power plant.

But Cordele and the situation it has created can hamper and handicap this Company's farm electrification program very seriously. It has already done this to some extent by stirring up hostility toward this Company in some other cities.

In most cases, the Company has to wait from one to five years after it builds a farm line before it can hope to get any return on the cost of building the line. No business enterprise could afford to take such a long chance in the face of a hostile public attitude.

And, It Also Injures Cordele and Crisp County

What Cordele and Crisp County have done or choose to do in the future is their own business. But agitators in other cities are seeking to plunge their communities into similar expensive experiments, and taxpayers in those cities will be interested in some of the results of the Cordele experiment.

Cordele and Crisp County have mortgaged every piece of property in the county in order to build an expensive electric system. Naturally it will have to be paid for. It can be paid for only out of earnings by the plant or out of taxes. In cutting our rates, Cordele established rates which, in our opinion as experienced operators of electric properties, will not even pay the costs. If this is true, eventually their rates will have to be raised or their taxes increased—or both.

But, supposing that Cordele should make a financial success of its plant, what will it have gained by its venture into business? It will have whatever satisfaction there is in having had its own way, but what else beyond this?

Formerly Cordele had one electric system. Now it has two electric systems. Eventually it will have only one electric system again.

It defies inexorable economic laws for two electric systems to exist side by side. One inevitably destroys the other.

And regardless of which system wins out in the end, Cordele is the loser.

A community must have wealth in order to prosper, whether its wealth be in money or farm crops or buildings or electric power structures. Whether the wealth is privately or publicly owned, it is all part of the community's wealth. A community which destroys its wealth impoverishes itself.

If Cordele succeeds in its purpose in driving this Company out of its city, it drives out its third largest industry, its third largest property holder, its third largest taxpayer. This Company suffers by it, of course, but Cordele also loses by having destroyed a hundred thousand dollars or more of its community wealth.

Formerly the citizens of Cordele paid electric bills and we paid taxes. If we are driven out, they will still pay electric bills, but we will no longer pay taxes.

Obviously Cordele must make up such losses in some way, either by raising its electric rates, or by increasing its taxes, or by restricting its governmental activities for the welfare of the community—or all three. The following item is reprinted from the Cordele Dispatch of September 10, 1930:

It was announced today that the county officials had given Dr. Guy G. Lunsford, health officer, notice that the work of the Health Department would be discontinued January first.

CORDELE DISPATCH,
Sept. 10, 1930.

Electric Rates 23.8% Lower Than the National Average

The average rate of the Georgia Power Company, including charges to all classes of customers, is 1.97 cents per kilowatt hour. The national average is 2.59 cents. CUSTOMERS OF THE GEORGIA POWER COMPANY PAY 23.8 PER CENT LESS FOR THEIR ELECTRIC SERVICE THAN THE AVERAGE OVER THE NATION.

The average residential rates of this Company and its industrial power rates are both materially lower than the national average. Its rural electric rates are among the lowest in the nation.

As a result of reductions in this Company's rates, our customers have saved a total of $3,784,468 since 1926 in their electric light and power bills under what they would have paid for the same service if the rate reductions had not been made.

5,092 Georgia citizens are owners of Georgia Power Company preferred stock. They live in 300 Georgia cities and towns, and they own a total of 135,884 shares of stock.

In addition, another large group of Georgians are now in process of becoming stockholders, taking advantage of this Company's deferred payment plan and making monthly payments on purchases of stock.

Plans Advocated by Brent Basis of Waterways Meet

Representatives of Three States Began Arriving in Rome Sunday Night for Conference Today.

ROME, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Representatives from three states began arriving here Sunday night to attend the Coosa-Alabama river conference here Monday and make plans for the presentation to congress of a proposal to dredge and improve the Coosa and Alabama rivers to a depth of nine feet.

Plans advocated in a survey by Theodore Brent, national authority on water transportation, are to form the basis for discussion at the one-day conference.

Brent's survey would open territory to water transportation from Rome to the gulf, via the Coosa and Alabama rivers to the Mobile river, thence to the Gulf of Mexico.

Governor Bibb Graves will head a delegation from Alabama, composed of congressional representatives and prominent citizens from cities and towns along the two streams.

The third delegation will be headed by Senator William J. Brock, from Tennessee, which will be indirectly affected by the developments contemplated along the two rivers.

The Brent survey, authorized by the Mississippi Valley Association, is a comprehensive one. Brent in the survey estimates the probable cost of the federal government to make the stream navigable to the gulf at $40,000,000.

Army engineers who have been engaged in making surveys of the two rivers for several years will also be present. They have been asked to give information on the possibilities of the streams for navigation.

It is estimated by the Brent survey that the opening of the rivers for boats will mean a saving of $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 annually to the shippers of Georgia and Alabama.

P. L. BRAMBLETT NAMED GRIFFIN LEGION HEAD

GRIFFIN, Ga., Sept. 21.—Percy L. Bramblett has been elected commander of the Troy D. Barnett post, American Legion, at the annual election of officers.

Others named to serve with him were C. D. Randall, senior vice commander; John P. Taylor, junior vice commander; E. F. Travis, adjutant; Lyle Edwards, ordinance officer; E. K. Domingos, liaison officer; and T. J. Denham, chaplain. Davis Williams is retiring commander.

7 TONS MELON SEED SOLD SOWEGA GROUP

VALDOSTA, Ga., Sept. 21.—Between six and seven tons of watermelon seed will be sold by the association to members of Sowega for the 1931 crop, according to present indications.

The seed were grown this year on 205 acres, under contract, and only the finest melons were kept for seed. The crop has been harvested and the seed cured, but there will be continual shrinkage until December. The net weight will not be known until then. However, it is estimated that the yield will be between six and seven tons. The yield per acre this year was greater than usual and it is believed this will reduce cost and the price to the planters.

The seed are sold by the association at exactly cost and on orders are filled until January 1 and then filled in regular turns.

This lot of association-grown seed, however, will be sold at a profit. Sowega planting and many growers are buying elsewhere, or saving their own seed.

Alligators Seek Haven of Morgue And Elks' Club

WAYCROSS, Ga., Sept. 21.—Two alligators, as much alike as twins, with a propensity for wandering into town and seeking the pleasures and advantages of city life, were the subjects of the swamp, were found here several mornings ago. One was at the back door of the Elks Club and the other in the vault of an undertaking establishment.

They were both approximately three and a half feet long and seemed undisturbed by the sudden glare of publicity turned upon them by their little jaunt to town. The first 'gator as has been said, was at the rear of the Elks Club, but the second one had gained access to the vault in the funeral home of W. L. Hinson, after climbing a flight of stairs to do so.

The club and the undertaking are located in the same block, and another block away is a city drainage canal which has been swollen by recent rains.

It is thought that the 'gators may have ventured forth from this canal. As to their objective in visiting the city, the 'gator brothers were somewhat reluctant in giving an interview.

PINE PARK CONVENTION CLOSES ITS SESSIONS

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 21.—Colored Methodists today closed a Sunday school and Epworth convention in the eight-mile distant village of Pine Park, after sessions that lasted five days. The closing sermon, at 11 a. m. today, was preached by Dr. J. A. Martin, editor of the publication, Sunday School Literature, Nashville, Tenn. Many negroes of Thomasville attended the convention, and Dr. M. L. Walton, of this city, aided Dr. Martin in conducting the Sunday school institute during the past week.

In an address on "Good Citizenship," Dr. Martin urged the negro to remain in the south, as a matter of opportunity both for the present and for the future. Buy lands and pay taxes, he advised, and quit running off to New York or Philadelphia, or other cities.

CHAPTER ORGANIZED BY RESERVE OFFICERS

Col. Price, of Atlanta, and Major Bloom, of Macon, Aid Organization.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 21.—A chapter of Reserve Officers' Association has been organized here with a membership of 17. Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Muldrow, of the Georgia Military college, was elected president, and Lieutenant C. B. McCullar, 325th infantry, of Milledgeville, was elected secretary of the new chapter.

Colonel F. S. L. Price, of Atlanta, who is in charge of reserve activities in Georgia, and Major George L. Blossom, of Macon, president of the Reserve Officers' Association, were present and assisted in the forming of the new chapter. Captain Frank S. Mansfield, regular army instructor assigned to the Georgia Military college, was in charge of the chapter. Several members of the faculty at G. M. C., who are reserve officers, were also in attendance. Colonel Roach, who is in charge of the chapter, said that the new organization chapter is a meeting place at the college and any assistance that the college could give.

'BULLETHOLE' EVIDENCE CALLED CIRCUMSTANCE

MACON, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—While motion for a rehearing of Earl Manchester, of Rochester, Mich., condemned as the slayer of James W. P. is pending before the supreme court of Georgia, R. Douglas Feagin, Manchester's attorney, said a circumstance that discovery Saturday of what may be a bullet hole in a hall skylight in the apartment formerly occupied by Mrs. Sarah Powers will be "a circumstance" if the supreme court does not grant a rehearing and the case is taken before the prison commission—providing it is established that the hole was made by a bullet.

"The bullet hole, assuming it is a bullet hole, would not do Manchester any good unless he could get a new trial," Mr. Feagin said. "I have yet examined the hole, but it might help establish Manchester's contention that Parks was killed in Mrs. Powers' apartment."

Petition for a rehearing for Manchester has been pending for several months, and if it is not granted Mr. Feagin said he will appeal to the prison commission and the governor.

The evidence of the alleged bullet hole would be put before the prison commission, Mr. Feagin said, although he does not consider that alone sufficient reason for a new trial.

Manchester testified at his own trial that he committed the murder, and beside the Ocmulgee river, said a strange contention is that the murder was committed in Mrs. Powers' apartment, at Cherry and Second streets, and that he had no part in the killing, but helped remove the body to the river bank, where it was found.

Manchester maintains, Mr. Feagin explained, that he came into the apartment while Mrs. Powers was alone, whom he alleges he has not seen since, were dressing Parks' body in the bathroom. Manchester said he does not know in what room the shooting took place.

FARMERS OF CLAYTON INVITED TO ASSEMBLE

JONESBORO, Ga., Sept. 21.—A meeting of the farmers of Clayton county for the purpose of learning more of the co-operative marketing idea has been called by the Jonesboro-Clayton county board of trade.

The trade board has arranged through its farm committee to have an official of the Georgia Cotton Growers' Co-operative Association discuss the workings of the state organization both in relation to the individual farmer on the one hand and to the national association and the federal farm board on the other.

The local board of trade believes cotton is now selling at a figure much too low, and that the only practical way in which the cotton grower can protect his interest is by joining in the co-operative movement.

This meeting is part of the program of the board of trade to create greater interest in profitable farming. Such program to culminate in the Clayton county fair to be held on October 3 and 4, in Jonesboro, where $500 in cash prizes will be awarded for best exhibits of poultry, cattle, hogs, corn, cotton, handwork and canning.

All interested in this work are invited to attend both the meeting Saturday and the fair in early October.

SPALDING DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE ELECTED

GRIFFIN, Ga., Sept. 21.—At the recent state and county primary, the following citizens were chosen as members of the Spalding county democratic executive committee, from their respective districts:

At-large, W. W. Dineen, A. C. Swain, J. C. Pennington, Africa, C. H. Hock, J. H. Cowan, J. M. Walker, Cabins, T. T. Henderson, G. W. Patrick and J. M. Walker; Griffin, P. M. Cleveland, R. L. Jones, J. G. Land, O. W. Sibley, W. R. Harris, Quimby Melton; Line Creek, W. H. Scott, G. W. Biles, J. A. Putnam; Mt. Zion, J. D. Thomas, J. C. Touchstone, J. A. English; Orrs, J. W. Travis, J. W. Williams, J. R. Lindsey; Union, C. L. Elder, L. H. Steele, Marvin Park.

Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Duke have served as chairman and secretary, respectively, of the committee for several terms.

Justice Thwarted When Canine Flees

WAYCROSS, Ga., Sept. 21.—While two parties were claiming possession of a puppy, alleged by officers to have been stolen, the dog disappeared from the courtroom at Folkston at the past session of court and the question automatically solved itself, temporarily at least. No one received the possession of the pup.

Judge Banks ruled, however, that should the dog reappear it should be the property of Curt Smith, the claim of R. A. Shackelford being denied by the court.

'Better Farming Program' Topic of Carrollton Meet

CARROLLTON, Ga., Sept. 21.—In an effort to carry out the "better farming program" suggested at the Georgia Bankers' Association at Savannah last June, a meeting was held here at the Clifton hotel. Present were the bankers of Zone 5, with their officials and representatives of Section 14 of Georgia bankers, comprising 12 counties, namely, Carroll, Carroll, Clayton, Cobb, Coweta, DeKalb, Douglas, Fayette, Fulton, Haralson, Heard and Paulding.

Among those present were John H. Graham, Rome, Ga., president of the Georgia Bankers' Association; Walter S. Cottrill, Clayton, Cobb, Coweta, DeKalb, Douglas, Fayette, Fulton, Haralson, Heard and Paulding.

W. F. Boyd, Dallas, Ga., chairman, Section 14, Dr. Phil Campbell, Athens, Ga., State College of Agriculture; Dr. Hardman, Washington, D. C., department of agriculture; F. J. Jackson, of Central of Georgia railway; L. S. Skinner, Athens, district demonstration agent, and Miss Lucile Turner, Athens, district home economics agent; Freeman Strickland, First National Bank of Atlanta; Mr. Tillman, Chase National Bank, New York city; Ronald Ransom, vice president, Fulton National bank, Atlanta; H. H. North, president, Manufacturers' National Bank, New York city; D. W. Brooks, of the Cotton Co-operative Association; the county demonstration and home economics agents of several of the counties; and bankers and others whose names were not secured, and quite a number of ladies; in all there were from 125 to 150 persons.

Bankers' Plan Outlined. Mr. Graham and Mr. Cottrill outlined the plan, as carried out by their bank, the National City Bank of Rome, which is best suited to urge the farmers to adopt such a schedule as will first produce all needed foodstuffs for the home, and when crops have been accomplished then what ever crop or crops best suited to his individual conditions, soil, markets, etc., realizing that these may vary with each individual farm and all of the speakers disclaimed any desire or purpose to dictate to or influence the farmer, but insisted that the bankers desired to assist them in working out a program that will enable them to get out of their present deplorable condition.

Mr. Cottrill and Cottrill told how the farmers of Floyd county who had adopted this program of making the farm self-sustaining were prospering, that out of 250 farmer customers of their bank who had adopted the plan 170 have savings deposits over and above their checking accounts of $179,000.

Messrs. Phil Campbell, Hardman, Jackson, Skinner and others of the visitors made very instructive talks. Mr. Hardman particularly. He stated that he had recently returned from an extended trip over the west and southwest; he told of the difficulties of those sections, calling special attention of Georgia where there has been a greater number of farms abandoned than in other states and it cited the difficulties that lie out before the cotton farmers of Georgia because of the sharp competition of other sections where labor is cheaper and the soil more productive.

Egypt, Russia, India, South America are all being rapidly developed as cotton producers, to say nothing of Texas and Oklahoma, here at home; conditions that will make it mighty hard for Georgia farmers who do not live at home and off of home produced foods.

All of these speakers urged as earnestly as they could the necessity for a well defined program that shall provide food for the farm.

Suggestions by Miss Turner. Miss Lucile Turner, district home economics agent, told of the advantages of a real home on the farm and of the woman's part in a farm home, by decreasing the cost of living, where the housewife may find food every day in the year; also an orchard that would furnish fruits for the family, a garden fitted with modern conveniences.

J. A. Mandeville urged the beautifying of country homes and farms, by decreasing the covering farm and out buildings with advertising tags and show pictures, etc., which mar them; he also told of a trip he had made to Washington county to investigate a dairying experiment being made there, and of efforts they are making to secure something of the sort in this county.

Advice to Bankers. H. H. North, of Newman, urged the banks to follow their loans to farmers, just as they do with merchants, manufacturers and others; visiting him and interesting themselves in him, later they should find that by increasing the loans they might materially help him, that they should do so and not, as is too frequently the case now, dismiss him until debt paying time because they realized that the debt was perfectly secure. He would show a friendly interest at all times, inviting him to call at the bank and talk over the outlook, etc.

Later, on motion of Mr. Mandeville, the meeting expressed its approval of the plan and its intention to seek to put it over in Section 14. It is expected that other meetings will follow.

RED CROSS INSPECTS THOMASVILLE SCHOOLS

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 21.—Mrs. McChesney Jeffries, chairman of the local Red Cross committee on nursing, reports that during the chapter year just ended, six meetings were held, and members of the committee in Floyd county, Miss Elizabeth Brannan, Thomas county health nurse, made a careful inspection of schools of the county.

To focus attention on the committee work one of the committee members aided Miss Brannan in putting on Christmas trees at two of the county schools. A great amount of corrective work was done by Miss Brannan. Miss Jeffries made addresses before the Women's Club in the morning, before the town of Boston, and before the Thomasville Study Club, securing aid of members of those organizations in the school inspection work. More than $2,000 was collected and expended by the chapter.

GASOLINE PRICE HIKE FOR MACON

MACON, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The price of gasoline here Sunday was 20 and 22 cents a gallon, but filling stations advised automobilists to "fill up the tank" stating there would be a 2-cent advance tomorrow morning. The advance will be statewide, it is reported here.

CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED AGAINST PELLAGRA

Survey of Conditions Started in Ware County as First Step in Fight.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Sept. 21.—An active campaign to eliminate pellagra in Ware county has been launched through the co-operation of a number of agencies within the county, and a definite survey to determine conditions existing in the food supply is being directed by Miss Susan Matthews, extension nutritionist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture.

There were 571 deaths from pellagra in the state of Georgia last year, Miss Matthews points out. The report of Dr. George E. Atwood, Ware county commissioner of health, revealed that 20 of these deaths occurred in Ware county. There were several hundred cases of pellagra in the county last year.

Pellagra is regarded as a dietary disease, and the educational program to prevent the disease necessarily must include a study of the food resources of the county, Miss Matthews explains.

The campaign was launched Friday afternoon at a meeting of women leaders of the county held at the Ware Community Club house, when it was pointed out that the housewives of the county can aid materially in the success of the survey by having available information as to poultry, orchard, garden, milk and canned food supplies.

A second meeting of the campaign was called Sunday afternoon when all of the school-teachers of the county assembled at the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Y. M. C. A. to discuss plans for pursuing the work. J. C. Morcock, garden specialist of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, was the principal speaker, outlining plans for a garden contest for the county.

Professor R. J. Richardson, poultry specialist of the state college, will be in Warecross next Tuesday and will aid in the anti-pellagra work by planning intensive poultry activities.

The county-wide survey will include colored and white homes alike, and the assistance of Alexander Hurst, negro county agent, and Janie B. Jordan, negro home demonstration agent, have been enlisted for canvassing the colored homes.

The anti-pellagra campaign is being carried on through the co-operation of the state board of health; Health Commissioner George E. Atwood, Mrs. Anna Haynes Dittett, secretary of the welfare board, the State College of Agriculture, represented by Miss Matthews and other workers, Miss Lizzie Mae Hancock, home demonstration agent; Dr. R. J. Heyde, Ware county agricultural agent; County School Superintendent Ralph C. Cavender, and others.

State Deaths And Funerals

MRS. LOU STANTON. MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Lou Stanton, 77, widow of Henry J. Stanton, a member of the well-known family of the Devereux country, died at her home here today after an illness of five days.

She is survived by four daughters and two sons.

R. E. L. Spence, Jr., Returns To Face Charges in Albany

Came to Atlanta in 1927 To See Football Game and All Trace of Him Was Lost.

ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Robert E. L. Spence, Jr., fugitive solicitor of the city court of Albany, who disappeared from Albany early in December, 1927, and against whom three indictments charging embezzlement were returned by the Dougherty grand jury Thursday, arrived in Albany Sunday from Miami, Fla.

Spence came of his own volition, before officers from here and had opportunity to seek to bring him back. He was arraigned shortly after his arrival, and he went into conference with his attorneys, but no announcement was made as to what course was contemplated. It was rumored, however, that efforts would be made to end the prospective prosecution by making restitution.

Charges contained in the indictments against the former court official grew out of alleged forgeries of mortgages against real estate for the purpose of effecting loans from a trust company for which he was local agent in Albany.

It is charged that Spence forwarded fake loan papers on property of different people in Albany, sending in each case an accurate chain of titles running through the real owners down to the fictitious person in whose name he completed the applications and mortgages. When the loans were approved, it is charged, the checks would be forwarded to Spence, and he forged the names of the fictitious payees and obtained the proceeds.

The day prior to the Georgia Tech football game in Albany in December, 1927, "Bob" Spence left Albany, ostensibly to attend the football contest and to go from there to Washington in connection with a matter he claimed to have pending with the patent office. Weeks passed and nothing was heard from him. Finally it became known that "Young Bob" had disappeared, and reports began to be circulated concerning financial misdeeds of the formerly popular young man. The aggregate running about $10,000, it is said. When word came, and his property was taken; his family went to California where his handsome young son more than once was used in screen productions. His office was declared vacant and another elected to fill it.

None Interested in Prosecution. Nobody appeared interested, however, in starting prosecutions. Several grand juries met, returned the usual route of indictments, but no charges were presented against "Young Bob." Albany had about ceased talking of the strange case by April, 1929, when from Laredo, Texas, Sheriff O. F. Tarver received a telegram stating that Spence had surrendered himself to officers at that place to be returned to Georgia. The telegram stated that he had been serving an enlistment in the army under the assumed name of C. V. Ray. Sheriff Tarver conferred with the county commissioners and they agreed that, in view of the fact that no warrant or indictment stood against Spence in this county, it was not incumbent on the county to incur the expense of bringing him back from Texas merely to see if anybody proposed prosecuting him. And this Texas officer was so notified, with the result that Spence went back to the army and Albany in time quit talking about "Young Bob" Spence once more.

But time went on, and the Dougherty county grand jury met for its fall term last week. It is said that this is the last grand jury at which the matter could be presented within the statute of limitation. Whether this is true or not the judicial body completed its investigation of criminal matters last Thursday afternoon and its last indictments were against "Young Bob."

Restitution May Close Case. Members of the grand jury stated that they were not privileged to make any statements regarding the case. Dan L. Gibson, foreman of the body, stated that the only information the body felt that it could legally divulge was that testimony was submitted to the grand jurors which caused them to believe, in connection with the law given them by Solicitor General Robert B. Short, that the indictments were justified.

Trial week of criminal cases in the court begins Monday with Judge B. C. Gardner, of Camilla, presiding, and Solicitor Short in charge of the prosecutions. It remains to be seen if cases against Spence will be brought to trial, or if a settlement out of court based on restitution, is made.

EUCCHARISTIC CONGRESS OPENS IN OMAHA TODAY

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 21.—(UN)—Omaha tonight became a center of American Catholicism as more than 50,000 laymen and clerics gathered for the opening tomorrow of the four-day national eucharistic congress.

This year's congress, first of its kind in 10 years, will be opened formally when the Right Rev. Monsignor James Stenson, vicar general of the Omaha diocese, and his party leave for Davenport, Iowa, to meet the apostolic delegate, the most Reverend Pietro Fumasoni Biondi, and escort him to the city.

A civic reception for the apostolic delegate and other guests will be held in the Art-schrenk temple Monday night with more than 20,000 persons attending. Paul Martin, of Omaha, will make the address of welcome for the church's laity; Governor Arthur Weaver will represent Nebraska and the most Reverend Pietro Fumasoni Biondi will respond.

The congress will reach a climax Thursday with a grand parade. More than 25,000 marchers, representing 20,000,000 Roman Catholics in the United States, will participate.

Peanut To Come Into Own Today as Circus Arrives

Miss Mabel Pelke, champion girl gymnast. Miss Pelke is one of the stars of the Sells-Floto circus, which will exhibit this afternoon and tonight on the Highland Avenue grounds. Hanging by a suspended rope, Miss Pelke casts her body over her shoulder 125 times without a pause.

Today is the day that the humble peanut comes into its own. Today is the day that Mother and Father take little Willie and Mary to see the circus, not that they are interested in what goes on under the big top, but they just want to give the youngsters an opportunity to see the lions and tigers, the elephants and trained horses, the petite equestriennes, the stalwart acrobats and the many other features of the big show. But statisticians with the circus state that over 75 per cent of those who attend enter on adult tickets; so another old-time fable goes by the boards.

Early Sunday morning the long steel trains of Sells-Floto arrived via the Georgia railroad from Athens. On their arrival in Atlanta the cars were immediately switched to the Southern railway. Just as rapidly as one section was unloaded another string of double-length cars rolled into the siding. The last section brought Tom Mix, who resides in a private Pullman, that is the equal of any in the country. And on the same train was a private stock car, which quartered "Tons" and the other thoroughbred Mix horses, from the Mix ranch in Arizona.

He Hated to take off his Hat!

Until... He went to Thomas'

TOM THOMPSON* was not vain, nor was he conceited about his personal appearance. He found that his lack of hair actually hindered his business progress. Not infrequently would he be fully prepared to make a masterful sales presentation to a prospective customer only to be balked when he removed his hat and exposed his bald head. Friends "wise-cracked" about it and although new acquaintances and business prospects did not boldly mention it, Tom knew they were thinking, "Too bad he had to take off his hat—he looked so much younger with it on."

In Tom's case baldness actually cost him money. No matter how forceful were his sales arguments, he could not keep his customers' eyes off his bald head. Finally he came to The Thomas'—was accepted for treatment after a scientific scalp examination and now a growth of new hair covers his scalp in a natural manner. The Thomas' had relieved him of the embarrassment of baldness.

You, too, should call at a Thomas' office for a free scalp examination. If your hair is falling, your scalp itchy or laden with dandruff—let Thomas' overcome these troubles. If your hair is thin or even if you are bald—let Thomas' help you regrow your hair. Thomas' treatment is proved by 16 years of success and now is administered to more than 1,600 persons each day.

You will not be accepted for treatment unless The Thomas' specialist is reasonably sure you will receive the results which you expect. Remember—no charge is made for the scalp examination at any time.

'Office Wife' Pleasing As Paramount Feature

AT THE PARAMOUNT. "THE OFFICE WIFE," with Dorothy Mackall and Lewis Stone, feature picture presentation. Lillian Roth in "Meet the Boy Friend." A Mack Bennett comedy, "Hello Television." And Adolph Goebel at the organ playing "College Days."

The extent to which a woman may make herself valuable—even necessary—to a man may (ladies take note) decide her ultimate worth to him. "The Office Wife," at the Paramount points out this week.

With Dorothy Mackall as the leading lady and Lewis Stone opposite, the presentation is indeed one of those entertaining romances that we all enjoy. The plot is of the modern trend, with an efficient and pulchritudinous secretary taking a religious interest in the welfare of her boss—both business and personal. Meanwhile, of course, the plot is thickened with a bit of literary liaison which makes her flirtations with other men while her husband keeps his nose to the office grindstone.

Miss Mackall is the secretary, and Mr. Stone is a very executive-looking and acting boss. They eventually fall in love, and things pick up considerably.

Other tid-bits of entertainment at the Paramount this week are "Meet the Boy Friend" and Mack Bennett's "Hello Television." Stage features have been discontinued but Adolph Goebel still will be seen and heard at the organ. —R. E. POWELL

'Madame Satan' Old Story Rejuvenated

AT THE FOX. "MADAME SATAN," an M. G. M. feature with Kay Johnson, Reginald Denny, Roland Young and Lillian Roth. Sound news reel. On the stage, Panchon and Marco's "Sisters '32." Mel Ruck and his stage band; Enrico Leide and Fox orchestra; and Dwight Brown at the organ. The feature picture at 1:00, 3:40, 6:38 and 9:27 o'clock. The stage presentation at 2:15, 6:08 and 8:57 o'clock.

"Madame Satan" is something of a breath-taker, at least for this conservative reviewer, and at the moment we aren't quite decided as to the extent that having one's breath taken may be deemed enjoyable.

One thing is quite clear. Only the present advanced mechanical state of the talkies and the mind of Cecil DeMille could have combined to give birth to such an entertainment feature.

If you are at all cognizant of the theater in its various manifestations you probably will sit agape at the reckless Mr. DeMille takes a generous portion of musical comedy, adds a dash of moralistic drama and a full share of bedroom farce and, stirring well, burles this mixture headlong into wild extravagant melodrama. On the other hand, if your entertainment tendencies have been nurtured solely on movie fare, you probably will be only mildly, if at all, surprised at this astounding conglomeration.

For this writer the effect of the whole was not particularly pleasant. However (who knows?) maybe one should judge this circus-type movie like a circus, just as a succession of acts. In that case, the bedroom farce is fairly good bawdy comedy, well handled by Roland Young, with some assistance from the virile Denny. Kay Johnson and the buxom Lillian Roth. The scenes wherein a party on a huge dirigible is turned into a mad rout as the big bag starts breaking up is rather convincing. In fact, considering the difficulties, the portrayal of the abandonment of the doomed airship via the parachute is well handled and has some kick. Of story there is virtually none. "Wife disguises herself and wins back errand husband," formula No. 3 for movie makers. As the above meanderings may indicate, it is our opinion you may like this affair if you aren't an "old liner." If you are, you may, as this scribe, enjoy some moments and be pained at others.

The stage show is pretty enough and has an effective still-walking scene, but is kept from being "just another" by Daisy, a horse, who is fully the histrionic equal of Ed Wynn's notable nag. If you see "Madame Satan" first and don't like it, by all means stay and see Daisy. She will make you forget any former entertainment deficiency.

Soviet Fiscal Year To Begin January 1

MOSCOW, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The central executive committee today decreed that the soviet fiscal year shall begin on January 1 instead of October 1, the date of the revolution.

Since the soviet obtained control all dates have been based on the revolutionary day—this, for example, is the 13th year of Lenin. The change apparently was ordered to bring conformity to the soviet's international fiscal relations.

The third year of the five-year industrialization plan and the adoption of the new state budget has accordingly been shifted to January 1.

Monument to Traitor Unveiled in East

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—A monument perpetuating the memory of a traitor was unveiled today.

Three boulders, surmounted by a Revolutionary War cannon and bearing a tablet now mark the spot on the big top. At the same time another machine was putting in the stakes for the menagerie, which is practically as big as the main tent with the other shows.

More than ten thousand people can be accommodated at one time in the Sells-Floto tent. The program is given in three rings and on two stages, and embraces a score of European features and novelties. Tom Mix is the outstanding attraction of the circus, and heads the wild west division, which contains two scores of cowboys and cowgirls, noted for their work in the big rodeos and roundups.

Performances will be given today at 2 p. m. and 8 o'clock, with the doors opening one hour in advance. The downtown ticket sale will be conducted at the Cable Piano store, 84 Broad street. Late tonight the circus will depart for Columbus, Ga., where it will exhibit Tuesday.

The setting of the sun today will usher in the Jewish year 5681. In the Hebrew it will be Rosh Hashanah, or new year.

Contrary to the European conception of the new year day, being an occasion for feasting and merry-making, the Jewish new year is designated as a solemn day of prayer and spiritual accounting.

Following Rosh Hashanah is a period of 10 days known in the traditional Jewish calendar as the "Ten Days of Repentance." It is during this period that the fate of every human for the coming year is tentatively determined by the heavenly court, according to the classic legend. That fate is finally sealed on the great judgment day, Yom Kippur, the day of Atonement, which comes this year on October 2.

The new year day and the Yom Kippur are the most solemn days of the Hebrew year. Millions of Jews throughout the world will gather in their synagogues and temples to observe the holy day.

Services by the local Jewish temple will be held in the First Presbyterian church, at the corner of Peachtree and Sixteenth street. Pending the construction of the new synagogue building on Peachtree street, the use of the church was extended to Rabbi David Marx and his congregation by the board of deacons and Rev. Sproule Lyons, the spiritual leader of the church.

The evening services will begin at 8 o'clock tonight; the morning services will be held at 10 a. m. Rabbi David Marx will lecture at both services. In order not to disturb the worship the doors of the church will be closed immediately after services begin.

Cool, Showery Weather Is Seen For City Today

Intermittent autumn showers will continue to be the meteorological outlook for Atlanta and vicinity today, it was indicated by the local weather bureau, which based its observations on advices from Washington over the week-end.

Variable weather will continue during the day, and temperatures will linger in the same regions of the thermometer that they have occupied during the last several days—between 66 and 72, with a mean reading of just below 70. While this month has brought an excessive rainfall, the observatory instruments still show a substantial deficiency for the year.

Spirit World Exists Beyond Doubt—Lodge

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Scientists are bound in time to recognize the existence of a spiritual world, Sir Oliver Lodge, British spiritist, said today in an address broadcast from London over the Columbia Broadcasting network.

"The region of matter and the region of religion are both important, the physical and the spiritual are interlocked," he declared.

"The methods of dealing with the two regions are not so distinct, so isolated, so discordant as has been thought."

"We entertain the ambitious hope of bringing the two bodies together and raising, as it were, a Jacob's ladder between the two worlds, extending the methods of science into another dimension and breaking into the region of spirit as though a trapdoor."

"Speaking for myself," he said at another point in his address, "I believe that existence is continuous and that death is not a break in its continuity but a mere sloughing off of the material body."

Knife and Gun Used In 2 Negro Killings

Knife and gun slayers were being sought by the police early this morning following the murder of two negro men Sunday night.

Felled by a fusillade of gun fire as he stood in front of a restaurant in the 300 block of Merriitts avenue, Frank "Sug" Owens, of 500 Bishop street, died in the receiving room of Grady hospital shortly after 8 o'clock. He had been shot twice through the head, attendants said. Police were unable to trace his assailant.

Will White, address unknown, was fatally stabbed at the home of his wife, 317 Lyons avenue, late Sunday night, according to a police report. Detectives said Arthur Arnold, another negro, of the rear of a Washington street address, killed him, following an argument over White's wife.

Child Plunge Victim Is Reported Better

Although it at first had been feared that the three-story fall of Ethel Harris, 8-year-old inmate of the American Rescue Workers' Home, would prove fatal, reports from Grady hospital Sunday night were that the child was much improved and in all probability will recover.

The little girl fell, according to reports at the home, when she and her 10-year-old sister, Grace, were playing near the window in a room on the third floor. Grace is said to have playfully pushed Ethel, who lost her balance and toppled through the window to the ground, more than twenty feet below. The injured child is believed to have suffered a broken pelvis and other fractures.

East Point Couple Struck Down by Car

Simultaneously struck down by the same automobile at Ben Hill road and Washington street, East Point, Sunday night, Mr. and Mrs. John Harmon, of 700 Sims street, were injured, the former severely but not seriously.

Taken to Grady hospital by a Hemperly ambulance, they were given emergency treatment and dismissed. Harmon, who suffered a deep scalp laceration, stated that the auto driven by a young white man, stopped after the accident but that the driver's name was not immediately obtained. East Point police late Sunday night were investigating.

The Ford Truck has rugged strength

THE strength and reliability of the Ford 1 1/2-ton truck are well indicated by the excellent service it is giving in a large number of widely different businesses. Under the varying requirements the Ford truck is called upon to meet, its performance is uniformly good, and marked by a high degree of economy.

Perhaps no other service imposes greater demands on the strength, power, and endurance of a chassis than haulage of materials in dump bodies. In this, as in other fields, the Ford truck has proved its mettle.

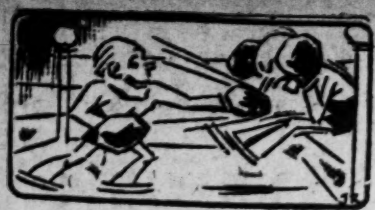

In order, therefore, to make available trucks of this type at economical prices, the Ford Motor Company has added a series of five dump bodies to the present standard line.

These include light and heavy hydraulic, and gravity and hand-hoist dump bodies, and a body with mechanical power-hoist. This provides a wide range of selection, as to price and hoisting method. With the Ford chassis, these bodies form units of high value, embodying the reliability, economy, long life, and strength which characterize Ford products.

In addition, there is a wide variety of body-types available on both the 131 1/2-inch and 157-inch wheelbase chassis, including the standard stake, platform, and panel bodies. Both open and closed cabs can be supplied, and dual rear wheels are available at small additional cost.

BLUE DEVILS

Duke Squad Looks Tough and Ready for Good Season—Sophs Must Come Through for Real Success.

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles on Southern Conference football teams written by Ralph McGill after seeing the squad in practice. Another follows tomorrow.

By Ralph McGill.

Duke's Blue Devils, who had the devil of a season in 1929, give every indication of being what the boys call a tough football team this fall. They will win no championship but if the sophomores can come through their game with South Carolina this week with a margin of even one point Jimmy DeHart is likely to produce his best football team in what is his last season at Raleigh.

For one thing, his squad seems to possess more spirit. That intangible substance, which the sophisticated moderns poke fun at as "dying for dear old Yale," is vitally necessary to a football team.

Duke's players wanted to win but there was no tradition at Duke. This is just the eleventh season for the Blue Devils. They have no long years of rivalry with other teams to point to and for.

Duke took up football shortly after the University acquired its present name. It was formerly Trinity college and Trinity, after a great football team near a quarter of a century ago, abolished football after two players were injured in play.

After 11 years the Duke teams are just finding themselves and developing rivalries and fighting for traditions.

And if one doesn't think such things are necessary for football teams and their morale, just ask the next football coach one meets.

Saner Schedule, Better Material.

Duke had a team last season which was hammered to death early by Pitt's powerful pachyderms. They had a schedule which was preposterously difficult. Whatever ability the team had was beaten out of it early.

This season finds Duke with a more sane schedule and material which is potentially strong enough to cause trouble. If Jimmy DeHart can find a sparkplug he will cause trouble.

"If we can beat South Carolina next Saturday in our opener," said DeHart, "I believe we will have a good season. The boys need to find themselves. If they can start with a victory it will give them confidence and do more to weld them into a machine than all the coaching in the world."

Bright Sophomore Backs.

The backfield is sure to contain a couple of sophomore halfbacks. One is Ken Abbott, a Pennsylvanian, who weighs but 146 pounds but who can step, step, step in the open and in that secondary.

Dothan, Ala., which sent Johnny Mack Brown to the Crimson Tide and on to the movies, contributes Jimmy Mullins, a 168-pound halfback. Dothan, incidentally, is furnishing Georgia Tech with a sophomore halfback this fall in the person of Jap Hart.

Quite a town, this Dothan. Mullins, says DeHart, is the best interlocking back Duke has had in its 11 years of footballing. He isn't so large but his ability to block and nudge would be takers out of the way is a gift, declares DeHart. There is a chance that Mullins will be shifted to quarter.

Good Fullback Prospect.

If Mullins goes to quarter, as is likely, Bill Murray, of last year's team, and Ed Reiber, a sophomore, will battle for the halfback position.

The Duke fullback will be P. O. (Kid) Brewer, who is just a sophomore so far as experience is concerned. He broke a leg early last season and this is his first try. He is a large, well-built boy with a good stride and has all the physical accoutrements of a fullback.

The line, which will average 195 pounds from end to end, contains two very fast guards in Werner and Carpenter. Werner is 188 pounds heavy and is a sprinter on the track team.

Line Looks Fast, Powerful.

"I believe he and Carpenter can pull out and get into interference faster than any linemen I ever saw," said the Duke Coach, who remains optimistic.

There is a fight on for one tackle berth where Bryan and Hardin, junior and sophomore, respectively, are seeking the job. Taylor, of the 1929 team, seems to have the other position tied down.

Mark Roski and Hyatt, veteran ends, are back. They looked fine in a workout.

Almost a "Mystery" Team.

At center Duke has Emory Adkins. He was good enough to win the all-state center honors last season despite his team's bad year.

Add to that layout plenty of big, powerful reserves and there is no reason apparent to the naked eye why Duke shouldn't have a real football team.

One hesitates to dub the Devils a mystery team and yet to a certain extent they are. If the Blue Devils can get aroused they will go places and ring quite a few football doorbells.

DeHart's Pet Idiosyncrasies.

One of the peculiar features of DeHart's team is that he has signals called from the end position. It so happens that he has a couple of ends, Roski and Brownlee, who do the job well so he uses them.

DeHart has a new formation which he will try out this fall. It is a balanced formation with the "weight" neither to the right nor the left. It is a freak which may work. The halfbacks stand so that they almost face each other and one man is in motion laterally as the play starts. "Pop" Warner is trying out a similar formation.

"I don't want to explain it until I have tried it out," said DeHart. "It seems to possess real merit."

Tidy Little Schedule.

Duke's opening lineup will be minus three regulars who are on the infirmity list, one from injuries and two from sickness. They will be held out for the second game of the season.

The Blue Devils open with South Carolina on September 27. Virginia is next in the magnificent stadium at Duke. Davidson follows Virginia on the next Saturday. The next week Duke plays the Navy at Annapolis. It is the first of three road trips, to Oxford and Villa Nova being met away from home on successive Saturdays.

Two conference games, Kentucky and North Carolina State, follow. Wake Forest provides a "test" game and then follow Washington and Lee and North Carolina.

It is a tidy assignment the Blue Devils have. It will require a real football team to come through with a majority of games won. Duke can if the team clicks. The power, speed and ability is there.

Nurmi Easy Victor In Berlin Feature

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Pavlo Nurmi, the Flying Finn, easily won the 5,000-meter run at the "Nurmi fest" given today by the Charlottenburg Athletic Club. Nurmi ran the distance in 14 minutes 38 seconds, establishing a new German record but far behind his own world's record of 14:28.2. Petri, of Germany, was second in 15:21.8.

Sharkey Favored In Campolo Clash

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(UN)—Jack Sharkey, of Boston, is a 5-to-2 favorite to defeat Vittorio Campolo, of Argentina, in their 15-round heavyweight bout at Yankee stadium Thursday night. Campolo is staking everything on his ability to knock out Sharkey, as the South American will receive only $7,500.

GRID OFFICIALS, COACHES MEET, TALK ON RULES

Relations and Laws Are Clarified in Busy Session.

By Ralph McGill.

Southern conference football coaches and officials met Sunday in an all-day session at the Atlanta Athletic Club for the clarification of relations and rules.

Officials lent an attentive ear while coaches and one newspaperman, speaking for the football writers, expressed what they believed to be constructive criticism of the man with the horn and whistle.

The officials had their inning later on when W. R. Oakeson, commissioner of the eastern association for the selection of football officials, spoke on the subject, "A Background for a Well-Officiated Game."

GOOD MEETING.

The meeting was a constructive one with no recriminations offered.

Clarification of rules was offered by H. J. Stegeman, member of the rules committee from the third district, by Oakeson and three southern officials.

Coaches were most desirous of correcting the following faults common to football officiating:

- 1—Officials getting in players' way.
- 2—Blowing whistle too quickly.
- 3—Officials talking to players unnecessarily.
- 4—Encroachment of linesman on field of play.
- 5—Standard interpretation of rules.

Many other suggestions were made to officials, namely: following the ball more closely, prompt calling of penalties and adherence to the rule requiring the option to be stated to the offended captain in case of a penalty.

The shift, which must be stopped for a count of six this season because of the winter ruling, was defended by A. J. Stegeman in his clarification of several rulings.

"Do not go into a game prejudiced against the shift," he told officials. "The shift is just as legal as any other formation and there is no reason to be suspicious of it. Some officials are too prone to penalize a shift too readily."

STOP WATCH.

Stegeman told officials that the use of a stop watch would enable them to check the team making a shift during the first few minutes of play. The quick count, one to six, he declared to be a safe makeshift in case the officials were without a watch.

One of the most effective talks of the morning was made by Earl Dunlap, captain of the 1930 Georgia Tech football team.

Dunlap, speaking on officials from the viewpoint, said that too many officials "bawled out" players, thereby upsetting them. He asked for a more tolerant attitude on the part of the officials, pointing out that the players were playing under a severe strain and that officials should work to aid the play rather than upset it.

TOO MUCH WHISTLING.

Dunlap also pointed out that many times the premature blowing of a whistle or horn by an official, has brought on undesired penalties.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, pointed out the obligation of officials to the players, spectators and coaches.

"Officials should not attempt to do other than the complete the game," he said. "There should be no play to the spectators," he said.

"An official should not continually warn players of an infringement of a rule," declared the Georgia Tech coach.

"STOP THREATENING." "Continual warnings usually mean a penalty later in the game," he said. "When if the penalty was inflicted early the player would correct his violations. The officials should explain the penalty, but the custom of threats and warnings is unfair to the players and coaches," he said.

The Georgia Tech coach also urged the officials that they look upon each game separately. "Often an official learns that in a game one team has been guilty of several violations of rules. It does not follow," he said, "that the team will do the same thing the following week yet officials often set themselves to watch a team in an effort to 'catch' them in some violation."

He urged continual enforcement of the rules rather than any slacking up because one team was ahead by a good margin.

PRESS BOXING.

The writer, substituting for Ed Danforth, sports editor of The Constitution, who is in Philadelphia with Bobby Jones, spoke on "Officiating From the Press Box."

The various types of officials, as seen by the football writers, were designated. Football writers note that there are some officials who do little actual work, others who are "matinee idols" and apparently try to attract attention to themselves; officials who cannot keep up with the players and who "panic" for foul play; officials who seem to seek out every violation of rules no matter how technical, and finally the "main-spring" officials who work a game smoothly and efficiently with an eye to aiding the game and the players.

Lewis Hardage, Vanderbilt's well-known backfield coach, led off the afternoon session. Hardage spoke on the referee's duties.

HARDAGE SUGGESTIONS.

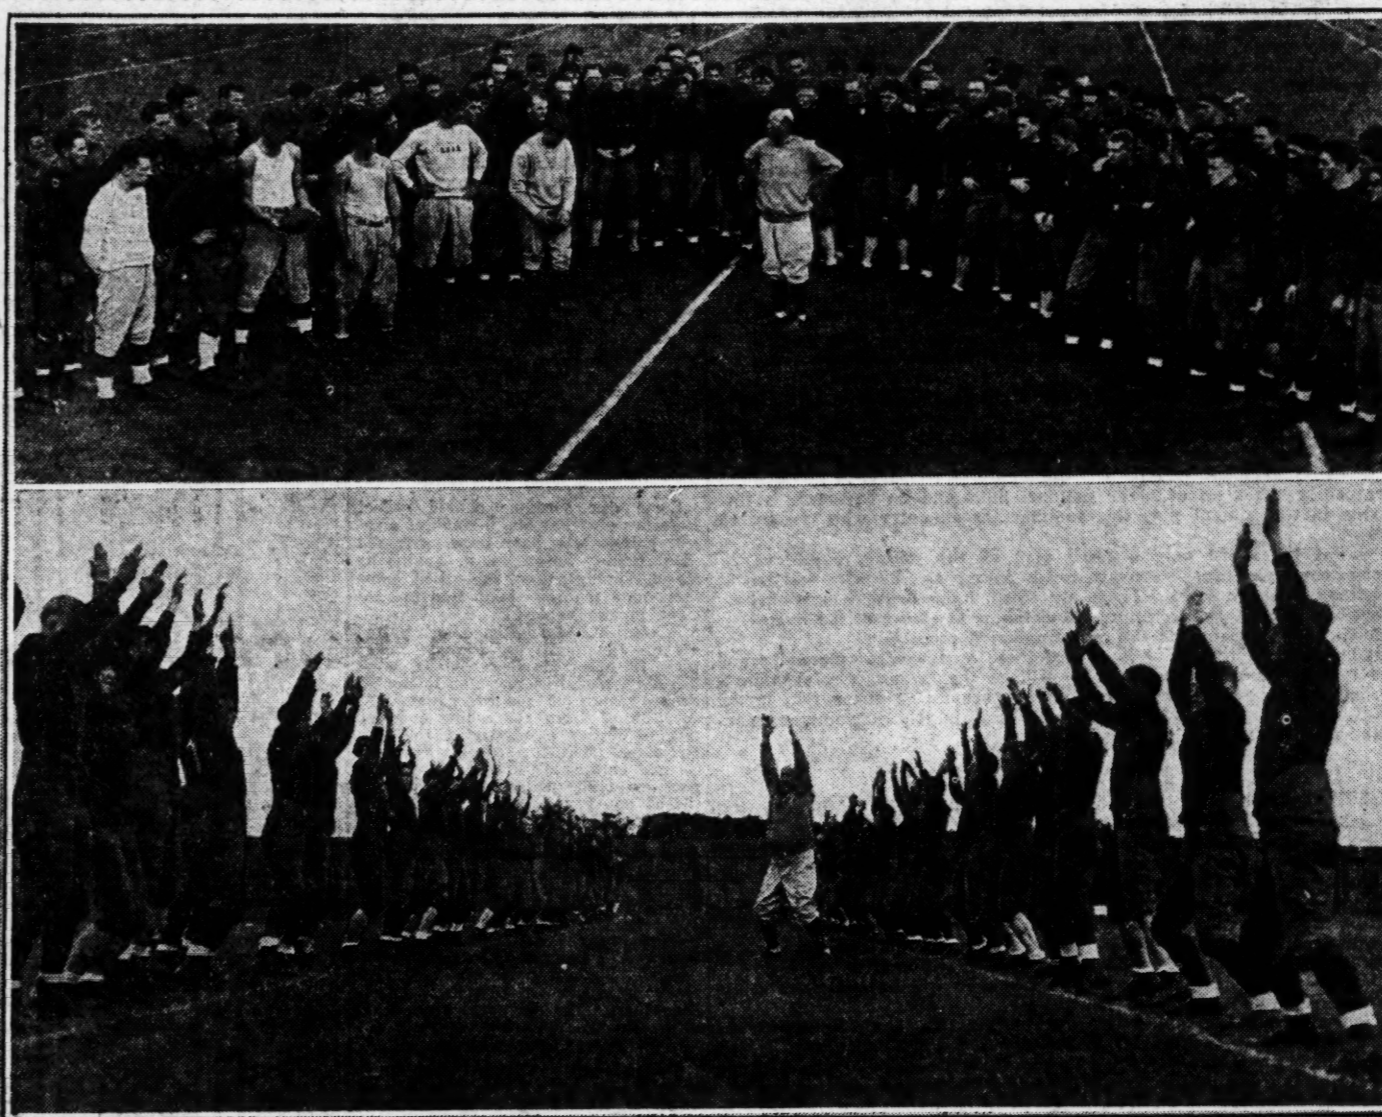

Hardage declared that the referees should be in condition to keep up with the plays, should always keep out of the players' way and obey any request to move out of the way and that they should also have a friendly personality and sufficient poise to conduct the game.

South Carolina's head coach, who was the most effective speaker of all. Speaking on the head-linesman, Collins used some very scintillating sarcasm to make his points.

"Coaches are objecting to the head-linesman," he said.

"Old Rock" Looks Solid Enough This Season

Knut Rockne, confined to a wheel chair and the hospital for most of the 1929 football season, is out with his Notre Dame squad again and seems to be as well as ever.

At the top Rockne is delivering a lecture to his candidates before practice and below he is taking a hand in giving the team setting-up exercises.

BRUINS RETAIN TITLE CHANCE

Robins Lose Pennant Hope by Losing to Bucs.

Only the Chicago Cubs were able to take advantage of the ill-health of the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals yesterday in the race for the National League pennant.

The Cubs, defeating the Boston Braves, 4-2, by virtue of Gabby Hartnett's ninth-inning homer, gained a half game and took undisputed possession of second place, two and one-half games behind the leaders.

Brooklyn's Robins went down to third place as the Black Sox from Detroit, cracked par by an even dozen strokes to triumph over a great brigade of sharpshooters in the 72-hole match for the $10,000 St. Louis open golf championship today.

The New York Giants lost all but a mathematical chance of tying St. Louis as they split a double-header with Cincinnati, losing the second game, 7-6, after winning the first, 6-4. They remained four and one-half games behind the lead, but gained a half game on Brooklyn.

Standing of the leaders:

Club	W.	L.	Pct.	Behind
St. Louis	87	61	.588	0
Chicago	84	64	.568	2 1/2
Brooklyn	84	65	.564	3 1/2
New York	84	67	.556	4 1/2

Tommy Armour Wins at St. Louis

SUNSET HILLS COUNTRY CLUB, ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Tommy Armour, the Black Scot from Detroit, cracked par by an even dozen strokes to triumph over a great brigade of sharpshooters in the 72-hole match for the $10,000 St. Louis open golf championship today.

Carrying on from his triumph in the professional golfers championship just a week ago, Armour dazzled the field with a sensational total of 276 strokes to clinch his victory. Two strokes to his rear was Walter Hagen another Detroitier, while Horton Smith, of New York; Joe Kirkwood and Al Espinosa, of Chicago, finished in a deadlock for third place with money with par-birdies 281 totals.

On only one round of his four 18-hole jaunts over the championship course did the Black Scot fail to break par. That came on his final round, when with shots to spare he loafed around with a par 72. His other rounds were all in the 60s, 67-68-69. Armour swept into the lead at the end of the first round when Ralph Guldahl, 18-year-old Dallas professional, started the big field with a 68. But Armour swept into the lead at the end of 36 holes with a 135 total and held his margin to the finish.

Indian Rally Beats Lincoln Giants, 6-2

A six-run rally in the seventh inning enabled the Federal Prison Indians to beat the Lincoln Giants, 6-2, Sunday afternoon at Hyde Park.

The Indians took advantage of several errors in the rally.

Dyson gave the visitors only four hits, which coupled with four errors and Dizier's two-base hit scored a run in each the third and seventh innings.

Famous Names, Faces Prominent at Meeting

Coaches and Officials Include Many Shining Lights of Other Days.

Names that newspaper linotype operators know well and faces that newspaper engravers would recognize were prominently displayed at the Atlanta Athletic Club Sunday.

The coaches and officials of the Southern conference, together with a scattering of high school coaches and college players, convened in a one-day meeting to discuss plays, rules and relations between schools and officials.

Sitting in a chair near a window in the assembly room was a little fat man, gold-rimmed spectacles letting a pair of bright eyes shine through.

His face was flushed with happiness; his eyes were alight with interest. He cocked a delighted ear to hear the running fire of comment that contained words which meant much to him.

Reynolds "Tie" Tichner, hero of many a mighty combat in the days when men were men, was out of the road to health.

HORNSBY MAY MANAGE CUBS

Rumors Give McCarthy Small Chance To Hold Job.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(UN)—Warren Brown, sports editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, said in a copyrighted story tonight that Rogers Hornsby was slated to become manager of the Chicago Cubs baseball team next season.

"McCarthy's contract comes to an end with the conclusion of this season," he said. "No mention has been made by the Cubs of any renewal of McCarthy's contract. As matters stand at present, both Owner William Wrigley, Jr., and President William Veeck are ready to declare for Rogers Hornsby as the 1931 manager of the Cubs."

The story explained that although Hornsby cost the Cubs $120,000 and five ball players he had been the victim of so many "bad-breaks" that his value to the team as a player this season had been "negligible."

"To businessmen such as the Cubs' directors happens to be," the article continued, "Hornsby's manager may still be worth that $120,000 and those five ball players and his annual salary, believed to be $27,000."

Veeck To Hold Off On Manager Signing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(UN)—William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, told the United Press tonight that he would wait until the close of the season before thinking about a manager for next year.

"Manager Joe McCarthy has a contract which runs until January 1," he said. "We will not hire a new manager, Rogers Hornsby or anyone else, until we have discussed the situation with McCarthy."

"We do not know whether he wants to come back with us next year, or how much money he wants."

"McCarthy has been an excellent manager. There has been no friction under his leadership and the Cubs' management has authorized no statement saying that he will be replaced next year."

MEMPHIS BEATS TEXANS, 4 TO 1

Beck Pitches Great Ball and Timely Hitting Brings Victory.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 21.—Beck's six-hit pitching enabled the Memphis Chicks, Southern Association champions, to defeat Fort Worth, Texas League champions, 4 to 1, here today in the fourth game of the Dixie series.

Memphis had one big inning, the second, when Joe Hutcheson, the Southern league's leading hitter, drove a home run into the right field stands to open the inning and was followed by some timely hitting to get in two more runs.

Frank Wadley doubled in the fifth and scored when Tex Jeanes followed with a line hit. The Panthers scored on an error, a base on balls and an infield out in the ninth.

The two teams play again Monday in Fort Worth. The series stands three and one in favor of Fort Worth. If the Chicks win the next game the teams return to Memphis.

All Details Arranged For Thursday's Card

Everything is in readiness for the coming fight card to be held in the open air arena at Fort McPherson Thursday night. All bouts have been arranged, and the fighters are all in training.

From the main Marshall Cardwell Willie Ptoomey go to the first preliminary all boxers have been picked for their ability to sock and their willingness to mix.

As an added attraction the Jack Sharkey-Victorio Campolo bout at the Yankee stadium will be announced from the ring.

Extra seats are being installed in the already spacious arena and additional parking space is being provided to accommodate the crowd, and the advance sale of tickets these additional measures will be justified.

JONES FLASHES AROUND MERION IN FINAL DRILL

Voigt Shades Bobby One Stroke in Friendly Duel.

By Frank Getty.

United News Sports Writer.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, A.R.D., MORE, Pa., Sept. 21.—(UN)—Bobby Jones served notice on the field at Merion today that he is fit and ready for the supreme effort of his golfing career in the amateur championship, which starts here tomorrow.

On the eve of the tournament in which he will bid for his fourth major championship of the year, the Atlantan, betted war for the east course of the Merion Cricket Club, over which 168 amateurs will attempt to qualify during the next two days.

Playing under a broiling sun and surrounded by a gallery of about 2,000, Bobby partnered with his name-cake, Dick Jones, of New York, in a friendly foursome with George Voigt, of New York, and Alvin Gunn, former Georgian, now of Pittsburgh, Pa.

VOIGT NEARS PEAK. The Atlantan scored 69, one under par for the championship course for the back tees, while Voigt, hitting his iron splendidly and putting with rare accuracy, bettered this with a 68. The New Yorker, regarded as perhaps the most dangerous in the path to Bobby's life ambition, has brought his game to a point close to perfection at Merion, improving each day he has practiced.

The Sunday crowd thus was treated to the spectacle of a friendly duel between two of the foremost contenders, who may meet in deadly seriousness some day next week. It may be in the semi-final round next Friday, for Voigt has been seeded No. 3, which will bring him into the same bracket with Jones. Jimmy Johnston, the defending champion, has been seeded No. 2, with Bobby, of course, at No. 1.

On the showing at Merion, Voigt was a more dangerous contender than the defending champion. George gave Bobby a great battle in the British amateur championship at St. Andrews last Decoration Day and should have won up with five to one to go, but a break in the luck favored Bobby.

"JONES' YEAR." Commenting on this, Chick Evans, veteran amateur who won both the American open and amateur titles, the latter here, at Merion, back in 1916, said:

"This is Jones' year. A golfer has certain years when things break right for him, when the golfing faerie seems determined to play on his side. That's the way it was with me here 14 years ago when I won as though Bobby had them with him this year."

There are other mighty golfers here at Merion, ready for the start tomorrow morning. Some of them have ambitions of their own. And many of them have had a history of victory in previous amateur championships. Evans, Quinnet, Marston, Sweetser, Herron, Von Elm, Egan have all been national titleholders. But they are not counted on as the obstacles to Jones' great ambition this year.

Several golf mysteries are brewing at Merion. It is a case of the show, among them the question of George Von Elm, former champion, is retiring from amateur competition of a national stature after this year.

VON ELM TO QUIT. Von Elm, who won the amateur title by defeating Jones in the final Baltusrol in 1926, issued the following statement today:

"I desire to announce that I am competing in my final amateur championship. Regardless of the outcome of this week's tournament, I was definitely, finally and absolutely retiring from competition in this greatest of all amateur tournaments. However, I expect to make every effort to play up to the highest standard it is possible to reach."

"I want above all things to have it understood that under no conditions, now and hereafter, will I ever, by my profession. After my play at Merion I shall announce my future plans."

(Signed) "GEORGE VON ELM." The blond Californian, now representing the Rancho Club, of Los Angeles, declined to amplify his statement at this time.

INTERESTING DUEL. The competition between Jones and Voigt today was, of course, of the most friendly nature. Yet it served to cast an interesting spotlight upon what might happen next week if they should meet.

Here are the cards of the two leading contenders for their final practice rounds:

Far out 433 544 443-30
Jones out 434 544 443-30
Voigt out 434 544 443-30
Far in 444 544 443-30
Jones in 444 544 443-30
Voigt in 444 544 443-30

Don Moe, one of the most formidable of the younger players, whose Bob Jones picks as a coming amateur champion, had a 75 today.

Leafs Trim Spins In Second Clash

MONTGOMERY, Ala. Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Selma Cloverleafs, South-eastern league champions, made it two straight from Greenville, Sally League winners, in the second game of the eight-game series here today by a score of 8 to 1.

The Leafs scored four in the sixth off Harmon and added four more in the eighth off Stokes and Baylin. Lefty Pettit was on the mound for Selma.

Conference Favorites Sweep To Grid Openers

RACE FOR S. I. A. A. TITLE GETS OFF TO GOOD START

Citadel, Wofford Tie at Top After Winning Tilts.

Six Southern conference football teams figured in early season games Saturday against non-conference members with no unusual results.

The race in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association got away to a fresh start with Citadel defeating Stetson at Charleston, 13 to 0, and Wofford smothering Newberry under a storm of touchdowns, 43 to 0, at Spartanburg.

Louisiana State, taking on South Dakota Wesleyan in an intercollegiate game to open the Tiger schedule, tore through the South Dakota team and took the air for a 76-0 victory. The game was no test for the Louisiana Tiger but gave other conference teams an opportunity to get some information on the offensive power of Coach Russ Cohen's squad.

NEW SYSTEM WORKS. North Carolina State put on a night exhibition at Raleigh against the light squad from High Point college, winning hands down, 37 to 0. It was State's first game under the Notre Dame system and a new coach, South Carolina's Gamecocks at Greenville gave Erskine a trouncing, 19 to 0. It was Billy Laval's opportunity to test the team he sends against Duke next week in the Gamecocks' opening struggle against conference opposition. The score indicates a great deal of scrimmaging for the Gamecocks and plugging of holes for the Blue Devils.

Virginia, another conference team, opened up against Roanoke, a state opponent, sufficiently to score 30 points to 0 for Roanoke.

GENERAL SKIP. Washington and Lee had no trouble spiking the scoring combinations of Randolph-Macon, winning, 32 to 0. Clemson, the mighty Tiger of South Carolina and a conference team, always to be reckoned with, took another South Carolina victory at Clemson college, behind the goal posts often enough to score 28 points. Presbyterian, however, tallied a touchdown against the Tigers, 13 to 0, in a touch-down frenzy.

At Emory, Virginia, the day's second night game, Emory and Howard defeated Gifford, 27 to 0. Howard college, an S. I. A. A. contender, got a day's jump on the members by playing a friendly game at Birmingham, defeating Marion Institute's Cadets, 51 to 0, in a touch-down frenzy.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Frank Rice

BREAKING INTO THE BATTLE.

MERION, Pa., Sept. 21.—This amateur golf championship is a test of match play at 18 and 36 holes, but before match play starts there is a slight formality that has to be looked after.

This consists of qualifying for match play through two rounds of medal play and these two rounds of medal play will eliminate about 80 per cent of the field by Tuesday night.

Today and tomorrow there will be few thoughts about making a play until these two 18-hole rounds of medal scoring are completed, leaving only 32 survivors from the big cast now struggling through practice rounds over the Merion course.

These qualifying rounds are always full of surprises and upsets and more than passing anguish. A few unknowns nearly always hit their peak at the moment and crash their way into the society of the select.

It will be a far tougher battle than usual on this occasion for, in addition to the seasoned and experienced veterans, there is a long line of younger stars who are quite capable of playing a golf course around 72 or 73. If each golfer could play close to his top game today and tomorrow it would take something under 150 to make the grade, counting the two rounds. As it is, something like two 78s will just about do it.

The main idea is to have the headlines slip through for the sake of the match play show, but they are all on their own. This includes such entries as Jones, Johnston, Von Elm, Moe, Olmstead, Goodman, Evans, Mackenzie, Tolley, Perkins, etc., and some of these will be left out, probably.

THE YOUNGER FLOCK.

THE field is full of young stars who may be heard from in louder tones than several of the veterans. Two of the best of these are Johnny Goodman from Omaha, and Don Moe from Portland, Ore. Both are under 25 and both are capable of brilliant golf.

Last September Goodman defeated Jones and Moe carried Voigt at a hot pace all the way down the stretch in the best scoring match of the championship.

McCarthy, Homans, Moffett, Seaver, McHugh and Lawson Little make up another set who might cause trouble. Lawson Little, from San Francisco, is the long-hitting young star who beat Goodman at Pebble Beach and carried Olmstead to the 36th hole where both got birdie 45.

But these are only a small part of the young, ambitious shooters trying desperately to finish among the 32 who will be left on Tuesday night. There are small, home-town delegations, often with the local pro on guard, watching the work of the home-town kid and giving all the encouragement possible.

It means a lot to qualify in one of these modern championships and the scramble tomorrow and Tuesday will be the keenest any championship has yet known. Experience counts heavily in these two medal rounds, but I have an idea there will be a bunch of younger years written on the calendar by Tuesday night.

THE MAIN EXCITEMENT.

THERE is much more keenness and general interest shown by the gallery here than one usually finds. There will be larger and more excited crowds this week, for the simple reason that never presented a case before where one man was after a fourth major title in one season—and this is the last stand, the climax.

The bulk of excitement centers around Bobby Jones, who is facing a chance no other golfer ever knew before and no other golfer will ever know again in the lifetime of this generation. What may happen when we are all dead will matter more to other generations than it will to those who will be contributing their dues to the dust of the future.

Figured out by the cold law of probabilities, this should be the easiest of the four championships for Bobby Jones to win. But that nothing in a game that has the ebb and flow of golf. Mental attitude for the day is a big part of any golf game, and no one can forecast the mental attitude of Jones on Wednesday when he stands face to face with the big chance.

Bill Tilden had his chance to break all records for an eighteen crown at Forest Hills, and how many figured Johnny Doe would block his road? And tennis runs truer to standard form than golf runs, since it is impossible to bring as much direct pressure on a golf opponent. If a golfer is hitting his shots and holing his putts there is no way to stop him.

At Pebble Beach a year ago Johnny Goodman opened his attack on Jones by winning the first three holes. A missed shot by Jones at the first—stymie at the second and a 10-foot putt for a 3 by Goodman at the third—and there the Georgian was 3 down before he knew the match was under way.

There is a big difference in being 3 down with 15 holes left and 3 down with 33 holes left, over the longer route. At Interlachen Goodman was 4 under par going to the 14th hole in the first round. That might have hooked anybody.

There are those who think the odds against Jones should be 2 to 1 and others, including several well-known pros, who think the odds should be 5 to 1 on Jones again to prevail.

At least it is a big change from the old days when the odds on a star against the field were 1 to 7.

In the meantime it will be interesting to see just how they stand Monday night at the end of 18 holes. There will be more than a few who will sleep but little as they stand on the narrow ledge of a 79 or an 80.

SHIKAT READY FOR BIG TEST ARE RE-ELECTED

Former Champion Wrestles Short Annual Meeting Expresses Confidence in Past Officers.

All principals in the all-star heavy-weight wrestling matches scheduled for the auditorium Wednesday night are expected to arrive in Atlanta today to complete their training for the matches.

Chief among them will be Dick Shikat, the giant German, who held the world's championship for about a year and is now seeking another match with Jim Londos, the present title holder.

Shikat is one of the greatest men in the game today. He won the championship and became an active champion. He barred no one despite the fact that he had less experience than several of his leading opponents.

Jim Londos beat him with a new leg hold. Shikat is coming along on the come-back trail but he is not the same disregard for opponents, meeting them all no matter how tough they are.

He gets one unusually difficult to subdue in Joe Komar, whom he meets Wednesday night. Komar, a giant Lithuanian, weighing 230 pounds, is an experienced wrestler who is also imbued with championship ideas.

Komar and Shikat meet in the two-hour, finish match, Police Gazette rules.

McMillin, who is one of the most prominent contenders for Jim Londos' title, appears in the semi-final, meeting Jim La Gene, Canadian heavy-weight.

McMillin, a team tackle on the Illinois team with Red Grange, is one of the greatest youngsters in the game. Atlanta likes him and Shikat and a great crowd is expected out to see them against strong competition.

order. The marines are expert at getting the situation in hand when two-for-nickel republics around the Caribbean put on a revolution. But these are not mere ignorant natives of a Coudra malar, shade must be suppressed tomorrow and for the rest of the week. They are lunatics of the most uncontrollable type, afraid of man nor beast nor marine. The marines have something coming to them this week.

QUIET EVENING.

Bobby shot his 69 and then went into the city with Big Bob, Chick Ridley and Chip Roberts to spend a quiet evening at his hotel. Business starts for Bob at 9:15 Monday morning. That is 7:15 in Atlanta, due to daylight saving time which prevails here until October 1st.

Until a golfer has played with Bob before a typical Jones gallery he cannot be said to have been placed and seen things. One round with Bobby Jones as a partner in a national championship puts years on a golfer's experience. If that golfer is actually discourage him from pursuing golf as a pastime.

IT'S TOO MUCH.

SHERLOCK HOLMES—The Musgrave Ritual

Musgrave's Story III.

By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Holmes continued to quote Musgrave's account of the old man's house, Hurlstone, and how he had found the library lighted in the dead of night. "Brunton, the butler, was there. He sat with a slip of paper which looked like a map upon his knee, his forehead on his hand, deep in thought. I stood dumb with astonishment, watching him from the darkness."

"Suddenly, as I looked, he rose from his chair, and walking over to the bureau at the side, he unlocked it, and pulled out one of the drawers. From this he took a paper, and returning to his seat, he flattened the paper out on the edge of the table, and began to study it with minute attention."

"My indignation at this calm examination of our family documents overcame me. I took a step forward. Brunton saw me in the doorway. He thrust into his feet, his face turned livid with fear, and he thrust into his breast the chart-like paper he had been studying."

"So," said I, "this is how you repay the trust which we have reposed in you. You will leave my service tomorrow." "He bowed with a look of a man who is utterly crushed."

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

SHADOW DOES RETURN.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

What're you do, do with your might, But first be sure that you are right. —Old Mother Nature.

Impy, the black Chimpunk, hadn't lived long enough to have the wisdom of his father, Striped Chimpunk. When pretty little Mrs. Impy insisted that the entrance to their home should be closed and another entrance made, Impy didn't agree with her at all. It seemed to him like a waste of time and energy. That was a perfectly good entrance they had, and he could see no reason for making another.

"I suppose you think that Shadow, the Weasel, has gone for good," said little Mrs. Impy.

"Why not?" said Impy. "Why should he return when he couldn't find anyone here?"

"I guess you don't know, Shadow we's well," said Mrs. Impy. "Shadow doesn't forget. There was no one at home when he made his last visit, but he knows that somebody lives here. The first time that he passes this way

He seemed to be hunting for something he couldn't find again he'll stop to visit this house of ours. If we have an open door he is going to come right in; and what chance will we have if he surprises us? We haven't got to give up our home. No, sir, we haven't got to give up our home. All we need do is to build a new entrance and close the old one. Just plain common sense says that is the thing to do."

Impy wasn't convinced, but he said nothing. He had learned who was head of the household, wherein he was smarter than some people I know. Having found out who was head of the household, he was wise enough to let the head have her way. It saved a lot of argument and trouble and in the end the results were the same.

"All right, my dear," said Impy. "If you say we must have a new doorway, it is all right with me. Where shall it be?"

"I've got the place already chosen," said little Mrs. Impy, who, as you may have discovered, was a very practical person. She wanted what she wanted when she wanted it. At the same time she knew what it was she wanted.

"Shall I begin filling up this entrance?" inquired Impy, and started to push some sand in.

"Yes," replied little Mrs. Impy, "but not from the outside. I'm afraid you haven't been well trained, Impy. The idea of closing that door from the outside, telling everybody what you are doing! The only way to close a door is to close it from the inside. Then you can pack the entrance hall full and there will be no chance of being dug out."

So little Mrs. Impy went to work to make the new entrance, and she also worked from the inside. While she was doing this Impy was closing the old entrance. So it was that, in course of time, the Chimpunk home had a new entrance in quite another spot. It was not at all near the old entrance. All the time he was at work Impy thought it was all foolishness. He didn't think Shadow would come back. However, he was wise enough to say nothing.

Three days after the new entrance had been made and the old one closed Impy was sitting on the top of a fence post. By chance he caught a glimpse of a brown form moving swiftly. His heart almost stopped beating. It was Shadow, the Weasel, beyond a doubt. Impy kept his eyes fixed on Shadow. Straight to the very place where the old entrance to Impy's home had been went Shadow, the Weasel. There he stopped and began to look all about. There was a puzzled expression on his face. He seemed to be hunting for something that he couldn't find, and he was quite unable to understand why he couldn't find it. He ran rapidly this way and that way, with his nose to the ground. At last he ran up, and with a snarl bounded away.

"You see, he did come back," whispered a voice in Impy's ear.

"Yes, my dear," replied Impy. "You were right, as you always are. I am glad we had this new entrance."

Harper's Article Praises Atlanta Advertising Plan

The municipal advertising policies of Atlanta and New Orleans form the subject of an article prepared for publication in the current issue of Harper's Magazine, by Don E. Mowry, nationally-known advertising executive, who lauds the publicity efforts of those cities, which he characterizes as the outstanding municipalities of the south.

"Atlanta," the article says, "has taken the trouble to have a thorough survey made of every factor relating to production and distribution. Complete statistical records are kept on 110 subjects. From this data and from the facts collected in subsequent special studies are determined the lines of industry that can most logically locate there."

When two southern communities definitely raise and spend more than one and one-half million dollars during a four-year period for community advertising and for industrial promotion it can be said without fear of contradiction that these two cities have full confidence in their future and not hesitate about telling the rest of the nation about their assets and their opportunities.

"Atlanta, forward city of the south, and New Orleans, the seaport of the valley, are two such cities. If anyone should ask you what cities in the south are outstanding today you would mention these two cities in your list without knowing why you selected them, unless, perhaps, you had devoted considerable attention to the development of community advertising."

"New Orleans has had an enjoyable reputation for years as America's most interesting city. Thousands of people visited there and participated in the atmosphere of the place—the last vestige of the old French in America. The development of port facilities, the opening up of new routes to South America, the economic trend toward decentralization of industrial expansion, all tended to stimulate local interest in the progress and expansion possibilities of the Crescent City. Leading banking institutions played the part as pioneers in opening up advertising possibilities and it was not long before the citizens became conscious of the need for regular, definite, constructive promotional undertakings on a wide scale."

"New Orleans urges industry to build on a rising market, treats of living costs in advertising copy, tells about the round-trip on sulphur or salt, and discusses the winter costs of manufacturing, the age of cellulose, humidity that helps production, and many other subjects."

"The City Builder, the official publication of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, financed in large part by the appropriation received from the city, had much to do with making possible the three-year advertising budget of one million dollars which that city has expended during the past three years. No efforts were spared to get all the people of Atlanta back of this program of advertising, and every contributor to the fund has had full knowledge of every step in the development policy."

"Atlanta has taken the trouble to have a thorough survey made of every factor relating to production and distribution. Complete statistical records are kept on 110 subjects. From this data, and from the facts collected in subsequent special studies, are determined the lines of industry that can most logically locate there."

"Previously to the raising of the million dollar fund Atlanta expended $250,000. Recapitulating the inquiries handled during the four years of the Atlanta campaigns, we find that only eight thousand of them came from direct inquiries, whereas over 30,000 came from personal visits and calls, thus indicating that the advertising appeals were of such a character as to cause many people to want to see Atlanta."

"The business world knows that 679 new factories, warehouses, and sales offices have been established in Atlanta during the four years of the Forward Atlanta advertising campaign, and that 85 concerns went out of business during the same period, and why. The net balance of 694 establishments, with their 16,911 employees, have an annual payroll of $29,191,500."

"Community and industrial advertising is a business which is arresting the attention of enterprising communities. New Orleans and Atlanta are two such communities in the South. Watch these two cities during the next decade!"

Child Health Meeting Is Set For Tuesday

What Georgia should do to protect and safeguard health and social conditions of its children will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting of the executive committee of the Georgia state council of child health and protection. The meeting will be held at the assembly room of the council at 282 Forrest avenue at 2:30 p. m.

The program of the council for the coming year will be formulated, as will plans for the next annual session. This gathering also will decide the date and place of the annual session.

The council was formed in Athens at the Georgia State College of Agriculture last spring on call of Governor Hardman of all health and social agencies concerned with the welfare of children. Dr. G. Y. Moore, of Culbert, president of the Medical Association of Georgia, is president of the council; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, former president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is vice president, and Miss Mary Dickinson, of Atlanta, executive secretary of the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association, is secretary-treasurer.

The executive committee is composed of Governor Hardman, Dr. T. F. Abernethy, state commissioner of health; Dr. M. L. Duggan, state superintendent of schools; J. E. Faulkner, executive secretary of the state board of public welfare; Miss Nina Page, J. V. Boehm, Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture; Mrs. Marvin Williams, Dr. W. A. Mulhern, Mrs. Clifford Walker and Miss Susan Mathews. Committees will be named at the Tuesday meeting to arrange for the annual meeting of the council.

Fidacs End Meeting By Honoring Wilson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The 11th congress of Fidacs, international World War veterans' organization, ended today with the placing of wreaths on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, this country's wartime president.

Lieutenant-Colonel Fred W. Abbot, president of Fidacs, laid one wreath on the tomb in Washington cathedral, in the name of the allied veterans, while Princess Cantacuzene, of Washington, deposited another for Fidac auxiliary. The simple ceremony was witnessed by practically all the delegates attending the congress.

SON OF THE GODS

By REX BEACH

INSTALLMENT XXXIX.

That downy cloud upon which Alanna rode ran around, it began to bump and to jolt her roughly. A flat tire probably. What luck. A voice was calling her over and over. It was Sam's, and he was shaking her. How rude of him! . . . Why was he rushing her through a blinding flicker of lights and shadows? The film had run off its sprockets perhaps; anyhow the whole theater was rocking and swaying. . . . Phaw! This wasn't a theater, she wasn't riding on a cloud; this was a taxicab. Yonder was the glow of the meter and the back of the driver's head. . . . That air felt good and those incandescent flashes that came and went were—street lights. Certainly. Whizzing street lights and this was Sam at her side. Probably she had fainted.

"Yes, you fainted." It was Sam's voice speaking. "Thank heaven, you're better! Do you hear me, Alanna? I'm taking you home and everything is all right."

The motion of the cab was stimulating; Sam was rubbing her hands and slapping them. For an instant she was with him, too. Her senses returned with a rush.

"I remember now . . . How did I get away from that place and—those men?"

"If carried you out. In God's name tell me how you got there? What a—terrible fright you gave me!"

Alanna was fully conscious at last. Life had skipped a beat or two, she had faltered and missed a step, but it was running again and she was swinging along with it as usual. Feeling fine, too. How silly of her to faint.

"Sam," she broke out. "You're white! White! That's why I went there."

"Yes, yes! We'll be home in a minute."

"I'm all right, honestly! I couldn't wait to tell you and—the man is sailing in the morning, so I had to hurry. There's nothing in the way, no harrier at all. Oh, Sam! Sam! You're not Lee Ying's son. It's a mistake. You're white, white, white! Don't you understand?"

The listener was agast. "This was dreadful. Poor sick child! And they had declared she was well. The liars!"

"I understand," he said soothingly. "But please don't excite yourself. Close your eyes, we'll be there in a jiffy."

"No, no! Listen to me." Alanna struggled out of his arms, agitated words poured from her lips, there was a wildness in her voice and in her bearing that told its own pitiful story. She clutched at him and shook him feebly, babbling meanwhile something about Eileen Cassidy, a police inspector, San Francisco, Lee Ying, a white baby.

How could he face Albert Wagner? How could he explain where he had encountered Alanna? Questions like these raced through Sam's mind. It was bad enough to find her in that dance hall, but this was 10 times worse. In a way he was relieved to realize that she was out of her mind, otherwise his shame at being discovered there would have overwhelmed him.

Her escape from the hotel would take some explaining, he fancied. Wagner was probably frantic. The whole thing was too unfortunate, too dreadful to think about. For instance, that crazy idea that obsessed her. Well, he had saved her reason once, perhaps—

He pricked up his ears and turned a startled face towards her for she had ceased her gibberish and was speaking to him in a normal, conversational tone.

"Sam! Quiet-shushing me. If you don't stop treating me like a lunatic I—I'll let out a yell. I'm not delirious. I'm as sensible as any one here. Think that over for a minute. Look at me! . . . Do I look deranged?"

"All right. I'm trying to tell you something of the greatest importance to both of us and it won't register. It sounds wild, I know, and too dramatic for any use but it's true."

"Alanna!" he cried in a choking voice. "If you're not out of your head, I am."

"That's better! I was getting mad by the minute. I thought you'd go up in the air, but—the whole thing is a failure. Now then, I'll give it to you in a medicine dropper: take it slowly. A relative of Eileen Cassidy's, by the name of Dely, is in New York and he declares you're no more a Chinese than he is."

"Absurd! I can't believe it! What proof is there?"

"Proof enough, I fancy: we'll find out when we get to the hotel. All I can do is repeat what she told me over the telephone."

This speaker proceeded to do and by the time she had finished they had arrived at their destination. In a daze Sam paid the driver and assisted Alanna into the hotel: he felt sure that this hallucination would be broken at any moment.

It was a half hour later. In the parlor of the Wagner suite, Mr. Peter Daly, spurred on by Eileen, had told his story in minutest detail and none of his listeners had followed it more closely than Albert Wagner. The speaker concluded by saying:

"There's no possible doubt about it. Dunne gave me his report on it at the time, and we talked it over later; how he saw Lee Ying pick the little fellow up on his doorstep and how the old man and his wife insisted that he had been sent in answer to their prayers. Dunne is still alive, he'll be glad to verify everything I've said. Mr. Wagner, you know something about the Chinese: they put great faith in their gods—the good ones do, and Lee Ying was devout. He and his wife were uncommonly religious. But the looks of Sam there is enough to prove what I'm telling you. He's no Chinese."

Eileen offered substantiation by declaring: "I knew Sam's father—I mean Lee Ying—better than anybody. He was my dearest friend. He always called Sam a 'Son of the Gods.' He declared he was more than a son: the Princess of the Colored Clouds had sent him. I used to wonder what he meant, but now I understand."

"As a matter of fact, Dunne nearly got himself into a jam over the thing by talking too much," Daly continued. "I was on the desk at the time and knowing Lee Ying was high caste and rich and a fine gentleman, we figured the lad would have a good home and amount to something. But some of the mission workers heard a rumor and began asking questions. They'd have taken him away and put him into a public institution so as to make a Christian out of him. Two to one he'd have turned out a yegg. Lee Ying got wind and soon after he moved here to New York. That ended the matter. Why I remember the kid well, dressed up like a little mandarin, with a red button in his cap and his hand in the old gentleman's. He was one of the sight of Chinatown and the politest kid I ever saw."

Curiously Sam inquired: "Who am I?"

Daly shrugged. "My guess is no better than yours. Nobody ever claimed you. We picked up a good many waifs but mighty few of them amounted to anything. Whoever you are I guess you must have good stuff in you."

"My father disbelieved in heredity. He used to say that the virtue of a vase lay not in the clay but in the potter's skill."

Eileen's eyes were shining and she spoke with conviction: "They have fairies in Ireland, why not in China? Lee Ying was the wisest man in the world and he knew things we'll never understand. He called you a superior being, a prince. I think he was right."

"And so do I," Alanna said softly. She drew closer and laid her cheek against Sam's sleeve.

Daly smiled and then looked at his watch. "Well, it's getting late and that's all I can say. I'm mighty glad that it happened along in time to help two heart-broken lovers, although the truth was bound to come out sooner or later. Mr. Wagner, it looks to me as if it's about time to say, 'Bless you, my children!'"

The father rose, laid a kindly hand upon Sam's shoulder and said in a tone of utmost sincerity, "I can't see that it makes any great difference who you are or what you are, my boy. The only thing that concerns me is Alanna's happiness. I've been terribly sorry for both of you kids."

"And so do I," Alanna said softly. She drew closer and laid her cheek against Sam's sleeve.

"A population of 500,000 by 1932" is Atlanta's slogan. Let's all pull together for a Greater Atlanta.

The Constitution's Weekly Business Review

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON

There is hardly a need for a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

Your Home Is Not Complete

It is very true, with about 75 per cent of our homes today. Why is it that so many beautiful homes are turned over by the builder, and called complete! Negligence, or just overlooked; one or the other is surely the reason why all homes are not weatherstripped throughout before they are called complete, for naturally your health, comfort and joy is incomplete to the same degree that your home is incomplete. For a perfect guard against the wintry winds, a perfect health regulator, a great assurance for happiness and contentment, see that your home is well equipped right now with our Numetal weatherstripping. The fixtures are easily attached, the cost is exceedingly small, and the saving in the coal bill alone will more than cover the cost—to say nothing of the wonderful addition you get in comfort and health, and at the same time you can appreciate the fact that your home is absolutely modernized. Call us right now for an estimate.

Frick Company Maintains Keen Interest in Service

"The Frick Company takes a keen interest in serving the people of North America in numerous ways," it is pointed out by T. H. Ball, Georgia manager for this extensive organization.

"With 78 years of service behind us, and large branch offices and warehouses in all parts of this country and Canada, the company markets fine steam and gas engines suitable for every locality, both portable and stationary.

"These engines, some light and small, others heavy and large, furnish power for all sizes of sawmills, to shelter man, beast, and industry, to crush rock or level hills, to fill valleys and turn nature's wildest fields into tillable soils, to furnish power or Frick's farm machinery that sows, reaps, threshes and grinds the many grains man lives on—and then the power to build the roads and the transportation to market.

"In financing, the Frick company co-operates with the farmer, and owner or group of people who may want an engine, tractor, threshing machine, a sawmill or any one of a score or more of farm or industrial pieces of machinery, and through their own banking plan they enable scores of people every year to own one of their labor-saving, long-lasting machines.

"The company therefore with its many district representatives and traveling salesmen is familiar with every cross-road and hamlet in this country and a large part of Canada and is therefore abreast of the times.

"With the knowledge at hand we believe that the lumber industry is given encouragement by the south's banking interests will begin to improve in this section first," says Mr. Ball.

"There is a big factor that is just beginning to count in the lumberman's favor," continued Mr. Ball, "and that is while the country as a whole overbuilt dwelling houses eight or nine years ago, there has been a greater number of city dwellings torn down during the time than for probably 40 or 50 years preceding and especially is this so in the semi-central sections of the country where the parking lot space has paid a better rental than old houses.

"Take the sixth ward here in Atlanta as an illustration. The residential population of this ward has dropped from a little over 31,000 to just above 15,000 during the last decade. The greater number of these sixth ward people have Mr. Ball bought or rented a new modern home out from the noise and smoke of a busy city.

"What applies to the sixth ward of Atlanta must necessarily apply to a large extent to the downtown section of other parts of Atlanta and all other fast-growing cities and towns and it will not be surprising that the front foot values for downtown real estate keep mounting and the close-in houses get older, the number of downtown houses that will be torn down in the next 10 years will be greater than for the past 10 years and it is not too far to say that the downtown house that sheltered as many as four families who put up with many inconveniences for the sake of living close in will be replaced by a new two and possibly three new houses to house them instead of one.

"It does not make any difference from what angle you reason the lumber situation, it is a fact that the 'bottom has been reached and the lumberman has one foot on the ladder of prosperity, and he will prosper in proportion to his ability to meet the laws of supply and demand. Our company has never been more willing nor able to help the present sawmill man or those who wish to go into that business on a small or large scale."

Shoe Repairing Service Specializes on Neat Work

Some 30 years ago two men, William Sutton and S. J. Bethune worked side by side in some of the best shoe factories in the large shoe manufacturing centers. Their ability as good workmen was recognized wherever they worked and they were rated among the highest paid men where ever they were employed.

Both being southern men they turned their eyes towards Atlanta about 25 years ago, and Mr. Sutton became associated with the M. C. Kiser Shoe Company for many years, while Mr. Bethune went with the J. K. Orr Shoe Company when they first began to make shoes here.

Mr. Sutton decided to go in business for himself a few years ago and opened a quick repair shop in the Connally building, and he stayed there until the new Alabama street viaduct forced a change in location.

However, the reputation he made there justified him in seeking larger quarters and putting in additional equipment and he moved to 11 Edgewood avenue. Shortly after making this move it became evident to Mr. Sutton that he must have the most expert men in the business as he was repairing every kind of shoes that were made. And then it also became evident that he needed an expert like himself to do everything from looking after the business to assisting the workmen in rush work. So what was more natural than he should confer with his old fellow workman, Mr. Bethune, and after several conferences Mr. Bethune bought half interest in the business and became manager.

With Mr. Bethune's introduction into the Sutton shoe repairing service he brought the full benefit of his over a third of a century factory experience into the repairing business and all shoes now done by this company are done as neat as if factory made, and every pair of shoes repaired by them neither looks like a cobbled job nor is there any way a person's friends can tell the shoes have just been repaired unless to notice how nice they look.

Mr. Bethune assures every woman or man that has work done in the shop that the shoes they re-sole are not crude or stiff.

One of the first pieces of new equipment Mr. Bethune put into operation is a Pen-Standard cementing machine. This machine is said to be the only one of its kind in Atlanta and the first known by him to come into the south. It attaches a leather half sole to a shoe like a patch is vulcanized to a tire. No nails nor stitching are required, yet it makes a perfect walking surface that will defy detection and will be shaped to the contour of the foot.

Shoes to be repaired may be left at the shop in the morning and they will be ready in the afternoon, or the work can be done while the customer waits, it being possible to repair a pair of shoes in 12 or 15 minutes.

Southern Agrarians Answer Industrialist

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Three southern writers today addressed a letter to Stringfellow Barr, of Charlottesville, Va., protesting against Mr. Barr's article in the current issue of the Virginia Quarterly Review, in which Mr. Barr welcomed the "industrialization" of the south.

Mr. Barr proposed for the south to enact in advance of its industrialism some protective laws against child labor and other abuses.

"It is a good program," the letter said, "but it falls short of our requirements. Unmitigated industrialism is an evil when it employs neither child labor nor cheap labor. Its consequences are to be seen in the perfect industrial communities of the east. Looking at these, the south may not be so anxious to duplicate their charming features as to preserve its own traditional way of life.

"You consider that southerners must have more money in order to have more automobiles, radios and automatic refrigerators. Handsome as these possessions are, they may come at a price too dear to pay."

The letter was signed by John Crowe Ransom and Donald Davidson, professors of English at Vanderbilt University, poets and essayists, and Allen Tate, poet and author of biographies of Stonewall Jackson and Jefferson Davis. The three are contributors to a book in defense of the south, "The Agrarian Tradition," by a group of southern writers which is to be published this fall.

Auto Repair Concern Covers Broad Scope

An automobile that falls short on looks, needs a new top, new upholstery, its curtains or springs broken, is not giving the owner the satisfaction he is entitled to. Charles A. Hubbard Top Company, 24 Piedmont avenue, specializes on this kind of work and does it reasonably and quickly.

Mr. Hubbard conceived the idea that if he was to do all the repair work needed on a car under one roof it would be more convenient for his customers and better for himself as well, so he looked around for the best man that could be had in each line and, being a first-class mechanic himself, he lets no job pass out of his shop that does not stand the closest inspection from the most particular car owner.

One of the most exacting jobs about an automobile is one that has been burned or badly wrecked. This means that the owner knows probably all he has left is a good engine or one that he does not wish to part with altogether.

Mr. Hubbard takes the burned or badly wrecked cars and rebuilds new bodies, if all burned, or replaces all as of metal or worn-out woodwork of metal parts in old cars.

In the regular automobile repairing Mr. Hubbard and his first-class mechanics are building a splendid reputation for their work, many of their customers are loud-spoken in their praise of their mechanical ability.

Mr. Hubbard not only does work for the owners of all kind of cars, but also does much work for garage men who are not as well equipped to do some of the many different kinds of work about an automobile he is doing.

Many of these badly wrecked or burned cars are being towed in from long distances.

Steam Heat with Gas

For a Single Room Or An Entire Building

HAVE comfortable steam heating without the expense of providing a central boiler, steam piping and fuel storage space—and without high operating costs. Each CLOW Gasteam radiator makes its own steam—is operated separately from the others. This permits having steam heat when and where needed, and prevents fuel waste. Operation is highly efficient, noiseless, safe. Thousands in operation in this locality. Find out now, how you can have steam heat with all the advantages of gas fuel at such moderate cost. Easy payments if desired.

"I know him," said Goyad. "He was king of the tribe when I was a young ape." "Yes," said Tarzan, "I am White. We are all prisoners. They wish us to fight each other, but we shall not." "No," said Goyad, "we shall not fight against Tarzan." "Zudo," said the ape-man, and they gathered about him, sniffing.

"What has happened?" cried Sublatus, who had looked with glowing eyes to see the death of the barbarian who had humiliated him. "The white giant has cast a spell upon the beasts," the Emperor's guest replied. The people looked on wondering. It seemed to them as if Tarzan were possessed of miraculous power.

The Ebony Twins will present a short interlude of popular piano duets at 3:45 this afternoon over WGST and the Columbia Broadcasting network. Marie Gerard, soprano, will be the soloist.

The anniversary program of station WTAR in Norfolk will include talks by Governor John Garland Pollard, of Virginia, and S. Heth Taylor, mayor of Norfolk. This program will be presented over WGST and the Columbia Broadcasting network at 9:30 to night.

One of the outstanding numbers of the Brigadiers quartet repertoire—"Song of India" from Rinsky-Korsakov's opera "Sadko" will be a feature of the General Motors Family party tonight at 8:30 o'clock through WSH. The arrangement for this was made by Frank Black, the Brigadiers' accompanist and conductor of the string orchestra which is now heard during the Family parties. Although one of their outstanding and most ambitious numbers, the "Song of India," has been broadcast only occasionally. In addition to "Song of India," the famous folk song will feature other numbers, one a ballad, the second, humor, and three of a popular nature. The ballad is "Song of My Mother Taught Me," Antonin Dvorak based this composition on a Gypsy air which he learned from his mother, Janice Melton, tenor, will sing the solo part in this selection as he will in "When You're Away," from "The Only Girl," which, incidentally, is a famous American composer, Herbert, wrote in exactly six days.

On the Shell program tonight, Wendell Hall, master of ceremonies and "Super Shell Star" will again be featured in a speedy show, and the red-headed music-maker himself will be heard singing a sparkling, new Peter De Rose song hit, "Koolin' Thru the Ropes" over WSB at 8:30 o'clock. When has probably introduced more De Rose compositions than any other artist for many of these hits have been written by him. De Rose, one of the most prolific composers of today, is also a famous NBC songster and pianist in New York City. Art Kassel, wizard of the baton, and his famous "Kassel's in the Air" dance orchestra, will play, among other popular hits, a fast, tuneful, foxtrotting number, entitled "Collins Medley," which he has dedicated to American fair-voiced and college men and to the alumni of the country's universities. Ray Perkins, known far and wide as a famous writer and vaudeville star, will be heard in humorous monologue and song numbers.
